$60.7 Million County Budget Gets a Hearing

By Jon Powers

KINGSTON

Tonight is the night that the Ulster County Legislature finds out just what the public thinks about its tentative $60.7 million budget for 1976... as if the legislators didn't already know.

The public hearing—probably the only one that will be held before the budget is ultimately approved later this month—will begin at 7 p.m. in the legislative chambers of the Ulster County Office Building. A large and vocal delegation is expected to question and challenge the lawmakers' spending priorities.

Although much of the projected $15 million budget increase (and $7.5 million increase in the amount to be raised by taxes) has been blamed on the soaring cost of welfare, the responsibility doesn't end there. In fact, social services appropriations actually represent less than 30 per cent of the overall projected budget increase.

There is no question that welfare appropriations will be higher in 1976—but so will revenues from state and federal aid. As a result, total appropriations for the four major segments of the welfare program will be about $6.1 million higher in 1976, but the cost to county taxpayers will increase "only" $1.9 million. State and federal aid will take care of the rest.

Even without welfare, there are some significant increases in sections of the proposed '76 county budget. The ones most likely to attract taxpayer attention and 11th hour reductions by the legislature are the contingency fund and an allowance for uncollected taxes.

The contingency fund now stands at $2 million, and was included in the tentative budget to protect the county against financial losses should New York City default on the taxes it pays annually on its extensive land holdings in Ulster County. But with President Ford's recent promise of $2.3 billion in federal loans for New York, the prospects of default have all but disappeared. The $2 million contingency fund in the Ulster County budget is as good as gone.

But an even larger increase is included in the allowance for uncollected taxes: $1.3 million in 1975, $3.7 million projected for 1976. That tentative $2.4 million increase, according to one county legislator, "is a lot of money to spend on the assumption that a lot of Ulster County residents are not going to pay their taxes next year."

If the $2 million contingency fund is eliminated, and if the allowance for unpaid taxes is reduced to the 1975 level, the total tax levy in 1976 would be about $12.5 million, or 33 per cent higher than the 1975 tax levy. And several county legislators have suggested that another 10 per cent can be trimmed from the proposed budget without seriously affecting services.

All this has prompted some cynics to suggest that the contingency fund and the increase in the unpaid tax allowance were added to the budget for just one purpose: to be eliminated later to mollify disgruntled taxpayers. They contend that county taxpayers, initially threatened with an 82 per cent tax increase that legislators had no intention of approving anyway, would be considerably less dismayed by a 25 per cent tax hike and, in fact, might be downright pleased that their representatives "saved" them 57 per cent. County officials vehemently deny, however, that such Machiavellian schemes were a part of this year's budget preparations.

Another important aspect of the county's financial picture may get an airing at tonight's public hearing: that still unofficial suggestion of a one per cent increase in the county sales tax. Adoption of that measure, on top of other extreme reductions that are apparently possible in the proposed '76 budget, could conceivably result in a property tax decrease next year.

Whatever ultimately happens, taxpayers won't have long to wait. The budget has to be passed by Dec. 20, and the next three weeks are likely to see several legislative sessions where the cuts come fast and furious.

In the meantime, all the attention is focused on tonight's hearing, and WHITA (We've Had It Taxpayers Association) is already bristling... but not because of the gloomy financial picture. WHITA's executive committee has chastised the legislature for scheduling tonight's hearing in the legislative chambers, where a standing-room-only crowd isn't uncommon because there are so few seats available to the public. WHITA feels the hearing should be held in a larger auditorium to more comfortably accommodate the public. Despite the prospects of a packed house tonight, WHITA has urged all interested taxpayers to attend the hearing.

Beached

A boy and his dog contemplate the riverscape complete with tanker, at Kingston Point Beach. Ariane Grossi and his puppy were taking advantage of record high temperatures Sunday. The mercury got to a balmy 56 degrees. However, bundling might be in order tonight as a seasonable cold front goes through the Mid-Hudson area carrying the chance of flurries through Tuesday. Reid Promises Firm Action To Protect Catskill Waters

ROSCOE
The commissioner of the Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) has promised to take whatever legal action is necessary to force New York City to undertake a more responsible management of its water supply system in the Catskill region.

But Ogden Reid emphasized that he hopes the department will be able, instead, to work out a "clear and precise" agreement with the city in order to avoid a legal confrontation.

For Ulster County in particular, the issue involves New York City's operation of the Shandaken portal, which controls the flow of water between the Schoharie Reservoir and the Ashokan Reservoir. Environmentalists have charged that inopportune releases and shut-downs at the portal have resulted in severe damage to fishlife in the Esopus Creek.

Speaking at the recent meeting of Catskill Waters, Commissioner Reid stated, "I feel very strongly that the state must have the power and does have the power, it is clear, to regulate the flow of water incident to our environmental needs."

"We are prepared to act within the department and in concert with the Attorney General, to take any legal steps that may be required; any legislative steps that may be required."

Reid's uncompromising stand on the issue has apparently softened the attitude of Catskill Waters members, who had earlier threatened to call for the commissioner's resignation if he did not take significant steps to bring about an agreement with the city.

'State Must, Does Have The Power'

John N. Hoeko, president of Catskill Waters, expressed satisfaction with Reid's stand, but warned that continued pressure is needed to bring about the necessary changes.

"Mr. Reid expressed solid commitment to work toward the satisfactory resolution of New York City reservoir management. He has welcomed and, indeed, asked for continued input from Catskill Waters," said Hoeko. "We now know the extent of DEC commitment, but executive action by Ogden Reid via the governor is but one course of action to follow. If the DEC cannot deliver, we must continue to increase public pressure and look toward the legislative and judicial arms of government."

Reid let little doubt that he views the problem as a serious one. "There has been serious mismanagement by the city and state of the Catskill waters," he commented, "there has been a desecration of the rivers and attendant waters. I've looked at the record... which indicates only a partial awareness of the problem, and certainly no clear and timely commitment for action."

Apparently referring to discussions the department has already held with the city concerning improved management of the upstate reservoir system, Reid stated, "No one is particularly interested in a few more fireside chats with city hall. I think what we are interested in is a plan of action."

The "plan of action" that the DEC has proposed involves improved orchestration of the Shandaken portal to minimize the effects of changing water flows on the environment of the Esopus Creek, as well as additional water releases out of the Neversink, Pepacton and Cannonsville Reservoirs to improve the stability of downstream areas. Reid said the DEC will seek cooperation from the city; lacking that, it will take legal measures to guarantee that the plan is implemented.

Tax Boost, $50 Rebate

WASHINGTON — White House advisers seek a hefty tax on motor gasoline to curb its use. A special panel called for a 10 cents a gallon tax in the 1980s.

With imports growing and hopes for spectacular growth in domestic production limited, a federal energy panel made up of representatives from the highest councils of the administration recommended new gas taxes.

The panel coupled its recommendation Sunday with a call for a $50 annual tax rebate to ease the burden on the lower income families that the panel said consumed less fuel anyway.

Retaliation Bombs in Dublin

DUBLIN, Ireland — Irish police say they believe two bombs that shattered Dublin's international airport Saturday were planted by Britons in retaliation for the Irish Republican Army's bomb campaign in London.

Police sources said Sunday the fact that none of the Northern Ireland Protestant groups that had threatened such bombings claimed responsibility for this one seemed to indicate British responsibility.

Brezhnev Keynote Speaker

MOSCOW — The Communist party announced today Secretary General Leonid I. Brezhnev will give the keynote speech at next February's party congress. Western diplomats said this was a strong hint Brezhnev intends to continue in power.

Moscow radio said the decision was taken by the 226-member Central Committee of the party in a plenary session.

Key Session in Spain

MADRID, Spain — Spain's powerful Council of the Realm gathered today to pick three candidates for the key post of president of Parliament. King Juan Carlos will choose the president from the 17-man council's list.

With the approach of his politically important decision, the king of 10 days has come under mounting pressure from Communists, reformers, and right-wing Falangists.

Motorist Slain by Mistake

ORLANDO, Fla. — Investigators want a coroner's inquest to delve into the slaying of a grieving motorist by a state trooper who had been mistakenly informed the man was driving a stolen car.

Frank D. Booth Jr., 50, who headed a federally funded employment program in Brevard County, was shot and killed Saturday by trooper Robert Rennie Jr., 25, who had been told in a radio check that Booth was sitting in a stolen car. Rennie has told authorities he drew his weapon because he thought the victim was reaching for a gun.

Postal Workers to Vote

OTTAWA, Canada — Striking postal workers across Canada vote tonight on a tentative contract agreement with the federal government to end their nearly six-week-old walkout.

The 22,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers said Sunday the weekend agreement would be put before members in simultaneous nationwide meetings.

The union refused to devolve terms of the new pact, but said in a statement that the 42-day mail strike — the longest in the nation's history — was still on.

"Any rumor to the contrary is unfounded," the statement said.

Sniper Fire Mars Hopes

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Lebanon's political leaders began talks today on implementing French-mediated reforms aimed at reconciling warring Christian and Moslem factions after eight months of civil war.

But hopes for immediate peace were marred by sniper fire in Beirut and Palestine guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat's prediction that "the bloodshed will continue."

Four Stores Open Sunday

KINGSTON

Four Kingston area department stores received good crowds of Sunday shoppers yesterday, although not all really wanted the Sunday business that bad.

Said the management of Britt's "We were forced to open because of the competition. We had an active day." Staff members volunteered for the work, and it is understood that Montgomery Wards and a few others will reportedly join those now open with the lack of Blue Law enforcement.

Big Scot was open for the second Sunday. "No question, we had a terrific turnout," commented a member of management.

Mammoth Mart had a "very good experience," and a store official said it would remain open Sundays at least until Christmas. Caldor's, also open for the first time, had no comments.

Library Fund Growing

KINGSTON
Kingston area residents are continuing to "respond from the heart" toward the Children's Library drive.

Over the weekend, a little more than $300 was added to the initial $5,100.36 collected from local persons and organizations during last Wednesday's "Beggar's Night" campaign to raise funds for the restoration of the Children's Library which was gutted by fire Nov. 19.

The new total to date is $5,467.48. That amount does not include $122 in pledges phoned in to the fund drive headquarters at The Freeman.

The drive will continue through Christmas Eve. Contributions can be mailed, or dropped off in person, at The Freeman office on Hurley Avenue.

All the monies collected are being placed in a special account to be used by the Children's Library once the board of trustees decides what course of action it will take to restore services and materials that went up in smoke during the early-morning fire on Nov. 19.

Fund drive coordinators are hoping that persons who did not contribute when volunteers conducted their door-to-door canvass during "Beggar's Night" will respond with a contribution before Dec. 24. They are also looking to the business community and civic and community organizations to help add to the fund's treasury.

Way Is Open For PLO Talks

By UPI

The U.N. Security Council has extended the mandate of peacekeeping troops on the Golan Heights and opened the way for Palestine Liberation Organization participation in next month's debate on the Middle East.

The Council, meeting at U.N. headquarters in New York, voted 13-0 Sunday night to extend for six months the mandate authorizing the presence of a 1,200-man force in the buffer zone between Israel and Syria.

The vote — with China and Iraq abstaining — came only hours before the mandate was due to expire and followed three days of intensive debate.

At the same time, the Council agreed to begin debate Jan. 12 "on the Middle East problem including the Palestinian question".

Outgoing Council President and Soviet Ambassador Yakov A. Malik read a statement prepared by Guyana, Cameroon, Mauritania and Tanzania that said:

"It is the understanding of the majority of the Security Council that when it reconvenes on 12 January 1976... the representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization will be invited to participate in the debate."

However, U.N. experts pointed out that Malik's statement was not binding since it was not an action of the full Council contained in a regularly adopted resolution.

U.S. Ambassador Daniel Patrick Moynihan said inclusion of the PLO in the forthcoming debate was "not a decision of the Council but a simple summation of the views of some of the members".

He said the United States agreed to the resolution "solely out of deference to the right of the Security Council to take up any matter it wishes".

James Murray, deputy chief of the British delegation, said it was up to the Council to decide at the time of the debate who should be invited to participate.

Israeli Ambassador Chaim Herzog said the Israeli cabinet would meet today to consider the situation.

"I see in this resolution a surrender to Syrian blackmail and Soviet dictates," Herzog said.

Syria had insisted on PLO participation in Middle East talks as a precondition to extending the U.N. mandate — a position backed by the Soviet Union.

In the Sinai Desert, Israel gave up control of the Abu Rudeis oil complex Sunday, ending the second major phase of its interim peace agreement with Egypt.

Israeli workers handed over the last of the producing oil wells to Italian technicians representing Egypt. Under terms of the agreement, Egypt will move a civilian work force into the area today.

Van Set At Plaza

KINGSTON

The Reynolds Metals Company's aluminum recycling van will be at Kingston Plaza Tuesday from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. to accept recycled aluminum products from the public.

Reynolds will pay 15 cents per pound for the aluminum brought in on Tuesday.

The aluminum should be clean and separated from all other materials. If there is a considerable quantity, it should be bagged or tied together.

Aluminum cans can be identified by their lightness, rounded bottoms and absence of seams. The Reynolds van also accepts aluminum foil and frozen food and snack containers.

Blunt Warning For Ford

Ford Arrives

President Ford and Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-Ping stand at attention during ceremonies upon Ford's arrival at the Peking Airport. To the left of the President is Mrs. Ford. (UPI)

PEKING (UPI) — China's top political leaders gave President Ford a warm diplomatic welcome today and then warned him bluntly that China fears the Soviets are pushing the world toward war, despite "rhetoric about detente."

"There is great disorder under Heaven," said Premier Teng Hsiao-ping told Ford in grimly worded banquet toast that ripped into U.S.-Soviet detente only hours after Ford's arrival for a four-day visit.

Ford in his toast said the China and the United States should work to make sure the world is not dominated "by military force or pressure."

But he said the course each country would take should be determined by "our policy and method according to our differing position in the world and our perspectives of our national interest."

Teng said U.S.-Chinese relations could "realize normalization" so long as both nations followed the principles established three years ago by Chairman Mao Tse-Tung and President Richard M. Nixon, but he made that point secondary to a gloomy assessment of prospects for war and world revolution.

"At present," Teng said, "a more important question confronts the Chinese and American people — that of the international situation...."

"The factors for both revolution and war are clearly increasing. Countries want independence, nations want liberation, and the people want revolution."

Then Teng turned his aim — clearly, although in diplomatic euphemisms — at the Soviet Union and the drive for "world hegemony" they insist the Soviets are mounting.

"The contention for world hegemony is intensifying," he said, "and, strategically, Europe is the focus for this contention."

"Such continued contention is bound to lead to a new world war. This is independent of man's will.

"Today it is the country which most vehemently preaches peace that is the most dangerous source of war. Rhetoric about detente cannot cover up the stark reality of the growing danger of war."

Then, while a Chinese band played the U.S. national anthem, Ford had about 10 minutes to collect his thoughts for a response to this uncompromising assessment, which set a rather tough tone for the diplomatic negotiations to come.

Ford's response was a moderately worded but firm re-statement of the U.S. position that Washington will not take instruction from Peking on the value of detente of relations with third nations.

He said he looked forward to "frank and beneficial discussions," including "areas where our perspectives differ."

Teng's banquet speech put the first rough edge on what had been a letter-perfect — and surprisingly cordial — diplomatic welcome.

China's finest — the top political leaders available — were on hand in Mao-jacket uniforms when Air Force One touched down at 2:58 p.m. (1:58 a.m. EST), bringing Ford to try his hand at strengthening the delicate "new relationship" created three years ago by President Richard M. Nixon and the ailing Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

Later, spontaneous Chinese warmth overtook protocol and thousands of Peking residents lined three-deep along Ford's motorcade route from the city limits to his guest residence. They watched quietly as the President's 100-car motorcade passed, but, all in all, observers rated Ford's welcome both warmer and more relaxed than the greeting Nixon received in his historic 1972 visit.

The Soviet ambassador was among the many foreign diplomats who showed up at the airport — without an invitation.

Ford, accompanied by his wife Betty, daughter Susan, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and many advisers, flew in from Anchorage by way of Tokyo — a grueling trip of about 13 hours.

'Let 100 Flowers Bloom'

PEKING (UPI) — President Ford may expound China's own "Let 100 Flowers Bloom" theory to Chinese leaders in explaining U.S. policy toward the Soviet Union.

The Chinese have ranked at U.S. efforts to broaden detente with the Soviets. They apparently fear Washington is letting down its guard against a nation the Chinese regard as powerhungry and dangerous.

The "Let 100 Flowers Bloom" theory ushered in a liberal period in China in the mid-1950s when authorities were willing to tolerate a variety of different approaches to communism's theoretical and practical problems. That liberalism quickly vanished, replaced by a hard-line stance, when Russia was perceived as an ideological enemy.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger got the blunt end of China's disapproval of U.S.-Soviet detente when he visited Peking last month to arrange Ford's trip.

In response, Kissinger laid down U.S. policy toward China in a speech before the Economic Club of Detroit Nov. 24. It was a "carefully considered" address he fully expected Peking to have studied thoroughly before Ford's arrival.

In remarks before leaving Washington, and in speeches in Alaska en route to China, Ford repeated the theme.

Like Peking, the United States will continue to resist expansionism by the Soviet Union, he said. But Washington will not permit Peking to dictate U.S. policies or strategies toward Moscow.

At the same time, both Ford and Kissinger repeatedly have stressed areas of agreement between the United States and China.

On arrival in Anchorage, Ford told a welcoming crowd, "You know and I know that we must keep the Pacific peaceful. There are fundamental differences between American and Chinese societies. We may not agree on some issues, but we have found an important area of common ground. Our mutual opposition to military expansion in Asia is basic. So is our pledge of noninterference in the internal affairs of other nations. I will seek to strengthen the understanding and to further advance a relationship based on mutual respect and mutual accommodation."

U.S. officials flying to Peking were certain the Chinese got the message.

They believe acting premier Teng Hsiao-ping and other Chinese officials, will be easier on Ford.

Kissinger said in his Detroit speech both the United States and China "have parallel concerns that the world may be free from domination by military force or intimidation."

Kissinger said this had been reaffirmed by both countries and each would oppose the attempts of others to do so.

"Our commitment to this policy will not change," Kissinger said.

"The United States will continue to resist expansionism as we have throughout the entire post-war period. But we also will avoid needless confrontations. We will not be swayed from our effort to improve relations with potential adversaries and to build a more stable international environment."

Crucial Oil Battle Set for This Week

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — If man had to pick one place not to drill oil wells it could quite easily be the sunlit ocean waters off the shoreline beaches of Southern California.

But that's where the oil is.

That is the crux of a classic battle between those who put the beauty of America first and those who feel they are realists about the needs of an industrial society in an energy short world.

The battle has been going on quietly but bitterly for months. It should reach a climax this week in a federal court in Washington where the state of California and 15 communities are seeking a delay.

If the court does not issue a restraining order, the Interior Department on Dec. 11 will open bids from an estimated 17 oil companies for exploratory drilling and development of 1.25 million acres of ocean floor bed.

The area to be leased is divided into 235 tracts, each about nine miles square. It is also divided into four groupings totaling 1,950 square miles — considerably larger than the state of Rhode Island.

The waters affected stretch from a point about 20 miles off Santa Barbara down to San Clemente and as far out as 110 miles.

At the last moment, the Interior Department withdrew from bidding another section lying just off the shore of Santa Monica Bay. It earlier exempted the area off San Diego on Defense Department warnings that oil-gas exploration there could disrupt one of the nation's biggest and most vital military complexes.

Looming over all the arguments pro and con are two events of the past six years:

— The blowout of a big well in 1969 on federal land in the Santa Barbara Channel which left a coating of oil on the shoreline of one of the most beautiful communities in the world.

— The Arab oil boycott which brought home just how vulnerable the United States in the field of energy.

It is a tremendously complicated situation in which there are really no good guys or bad guys.

Opponents of the Dec. 11 auction acknowledge the country must develop its own oil and gas resources. They argue that drilling and development should proceed cautiously until the environmental consequences are understood and safeguards taken.

Supporters say the overriding consideration is that the oil is needed, is needed now and that environmentalists really want to prevent exploration and drilling completely, not temporarily.

One of the biggest unknowns is just how much oil lies beneath the Outer Continental Shelf area marked off for leasing. There is a tremendous difference in the estimates.

The U.S. Geological Survey reported the potential recoverable resources total between 1.6 and 2.7 billion barrels of oil. The Western Oil and Gas Association (WOGA), representing the companies, estimates from 6 to 19 billion barrels with a consensus around 14 billion.

That compares to 9.5 billion barrels on Alaska's North Slope.

The Geological Survey estimates there is between 2.4 and 4.8 trillion cubic feet of natural gas in the offshore area. WOGA estimates there is as much as 28 trillion cubic feet of gas.

Figuring the present cost of $12 a barrel for imported oil, the Southern California area has a buried treasure of from $19 to $228 billion in oil depending on which figure you accept as the total resource.

Preliminary studies indicated as many as 62 giant platforms of the "Texas tower" type may be required. During the exploratory stage they will loom above the ocean surface as high as 17-story buildings.

Those production platforms are expected to be used in water depths up to 1,200 feet. Subsea wells on the ocean floor would be used in deeper water and perhaps close to shore for aesthetic purposes. The state has control of the ocean shelf out to three miles.

The Interior Department compiled an environmental report on the project which runs approximately 3,000 pages.

There is agreement on one point — oil spillage is inevitable and blowouts of the size of the Santa Barbara accident are more than possible. The companies say new technology has reduced the chances of major spills tremendously.

But there are sharp disagreements on the effects of spillage on marine life, plankton, commercial and sport fishing, recreational boating, pollution of beaches, endangering of birds and animals on small rocky islands and hazards to navigation.

One principal argument advanced by the state-city coalition is that a distinction should be made between the exploratory stage which is expected to take about five years and production which is expected to go to the year 2020 when the fields will be depleted.

They contend that the Interior Department should have the right to withdraw the lease rights should the early operations on tortuous bottom terrain in an area subject to earthquakes prove oil spillage and pollution greater than anticipated.

The oil companies resist such a proviso. They say it would have the effect of drawing the government into oil exploration and also would put them in a position of expending vast sums for exploration with no guarantee of profit or even recovering the money.

The controversy has divided the country sectionally.

Forces calling for delay have the support of Alaska, Delaware, Maine, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York which also have concerns about offshore leasing.

But they get little sympathy from Louisiana and Texas which have far larger offshore fields already in operation in the Gulf of Mexico.

There is pressure for going ahead with drilling from the oil-short Middle West. Among letters in the files of the Interior Department are communications from the governors of Arkansas, Kansas and Nebraska.

"Inasmuch as the state of Nebraska contributes to the common good of our country and the world by its abundant production of foodstuffs, we believe that each state should contribute to this country's common good with whatever natural resources are available," wrote Gov. James J. Exon.

Her Mother Never Gave Up

UNION, Ill. (UPI) — Carol Dusold Rogman, 28, was called a "medical vegetable" nine years ago.

A doctor told her mother there was no hope and that "all we could do is try to starve her by taking the intravenous out." But Mrs. Dusold refused to give up the hope her daughter's life could be saved.

Today the woman is married and has a 19-month-old son. Carol Dusold was in a coma for four months after severely bruising her brain stem and breaking her left arm in an auto accident when she was 19.

The Dundee Community High School Homecoming Queen wasted away to 65 pounds, her body frozen in a grotesque position. And after regaining consciousness, it took almost a year to learn to walk and talk again.

"I was glad I had a mother like I had. I realize now how much she must have loved me and cared for me and had a deep feeling for me.

"She was so determined that I was going to make it.

"She kept telling me, 'You're going to make it,' and that she needed me at home because my father was dead and my brother was in the service. Nobody was home except my mother.

"I had the determination to pull through. I don't know if it was for my mother, or for the religious beliefs I had, but I pulled through and I'm here to help whoever needs it," Mrs. Rogman said.

Neither she nor her mother resented the doctors who advised her life-supporting treatments be ended, she said.

"I don't blame them one bit. It wasn't their fault. They did the best they could because they had no knowledge of whatever was going on, except from former experiences.

"You couldn't expect a miracle. Although we did, we shouldn't have."

Mrs. Rogman said she doesn't remember any of the pain from the accident, but remembers at least one good thing came of it.

"If it weren't for that accident, I wouldn't be married to the man I'm married to now. Because my husband (then only a neighbor) saw the accident after it happened, went and told my mother and brother about it, and was with me all the time I was in the hospital for eight months."

She still limps, has a slight speech impediment and has a little trouble with her permanently curled left hand, but Mrs. Rogman said she really doesn't "see all the harm that came out of" the accident.

Tax Action Off Until '76

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — State legislators are due back at the Capitol Wednesday, but it will be some time — possibly next year — before they tackle Gov. Hugh L. Carey's request for $872 million in state tax hikes.

The Democratic governor and the Republican majority in the Senate are still far apart on the size of the state's budget gap.

Agreement on that subject among leaders must be achieved before any tax proposals can be presented to the rank and file during the emergency session.

Most likely to come before the lawmakers Wednesday is a proposal to consolidate the primaries scheduled for next April and September into one June election.

Other matters which will probably receive consideration this week, Senate and Assembly officials said, were a proposed residency requirement for New York City employees and a bill indemnifying trustees of New York City employees' pensions.

"We do know the primary bill is going to come up," an aide to Assembly Speaker Stanley Steingut said Sunday night. However, he said the tax issue "certainly is not going to be tied up this week. We'll be back next week."

With New York City apparently rescued from default for some time by President Ford's announcement that he would support federal aid for the city, some legislative sources predicted the state tax proposals might even be delayed until the opening of the regular 1976 legislative session in early January.

A bill merging the April 6 presidential primary with the September statewide contest was passed by the Democrat-controlled Assembly but died in the Senate during the regular 1975 lawmaking session.

The consolidation has been strongly supported by liberal Democrats. Critics have claimed that the Democrats feel that by June the field of liberal candidates for their party's presidential nomination will have narrowed and they can united behind one man.

The Democrats maintain, however, that their sole

BOLINGBROOK, Ill. (UPI) — Veteran trapeze artist John "Jimmy" Troy was wrapping up his comedy trapeze act Sunday night.

The crowd "oohed" and "ahed" as Troy — working 20 feet in the air with no net — feigned losing his grip on the bar and flopped about, grabbing it in the crook of his arm, slipping, grabbing it again.

Suddenly he wasn't acting. The 56-year-old trapeze clown lost his grip and fell to his death.

At first, the 800 people at the Old Chicago Amusement Park thought it was part of the act — until Troy hit the ground motivation is an estimated $10 million savings to state and local governments. An aide to Sen. Warren M. Anderson, GOP majority leader in the Senate, said Sunday night Anderson has not altered his opposition to the merger.

While Carey has claimed that without new taxes the state faces a $600-$700 million deficit in the fiscal year ending March 31, Senate Republicans have put the gap at only $264 million.

In addition to Carey's proposed new taxes, primarily an income tax surcharge and business tax boosts, he also called for cuts in state spending, including a wage freeze for state employees.

Legislative sources said Anderson was seeking a commitment from Carey that the 1976 budget would also be

"When he hit the ground there was a stunned silence," said George Condon, a spokesman for the park. "The performers rushed over but there was nothing they could do. He was dead."

Our Lagging Commerce

The New York State Department of Audit and Control recently concluded a 15-year economic survey of the state and there were few surprises.

For instance, The state's economic growth rate has declined and taxes have risen. The state certainly didn't need a survey for those two statistics. A declining economy and higher taxes have been going on in other parts of the country, also.

The survey, however, does give some thought-provoking findings as these conditions reflect political direction or influence on the state's economy during this 15-year period.

The political factors begin with the fact that this survey and its findings appeared at all. They prove the question whether Nelson Rockefeller, given other direction during that period, might have maintained for the state an economic growth on a par or better than comparable states.

The most significant conclusion to the report is that while manufacturing activity in New York State showed a marked decline, the philosophy of the department continued along the lines that this was the major component of its economy and that other segments of business activity would flourish automatically if manufacturing activity was promoted.

In another section of the report, an audit of state agencies showed a lack of management controls, inefficient administration and plenty of expansive claims of individual or divisional activity or achievement, when, as a matter of fact, none actually had taken place.

Regional offices had directed their attention exclusively to expansion of manufacturing activity and their personnel failed to follow up some leads, reported contacts or personal visits not actually made and otherwise misrepresented their actual activities.

A disparity between tax growth at an annual average of 8.8 per cent and per capita personal income growth of only 5.5 per cent is a prime area of focus for public policy makers, the survey found.

The Freeman suggests that the report spells out for those who needed it the major reason for today's financial troubles in both New York State and New York City.

The report covers the years 1958 through 1972. Accompanying it is an audit from April 1, 1972 through Dec. 31, 1974, when Governor Carey took office.

Albany Ave. Cemetery

Editor, The Freeman:

Now and then I dream again of things from here and there. I even dream of Jeannie with the light brown hair.

I toss and stir almost to the point of wakefulness, wrestling with poignant thoughts passing through my mind as I engage in my imaginary nocturnal stroll. The slumber of deep sleep gives way to greish apparitions that lay siege of my sense. As I continue to saunter, gradually through the veiled haze of which dreams are made there comes into focus the scene of the crime, the little unused and seemingly forgotten hallowed burying ground — the neglected and forsaken little cemetery on Albany Ave. just off Broadway practically in the center of our lovely historic city.

Picking my way through the maze of vandalized and fallen monuments I pause in my stroll and examine what remains of the once orderly tombstones. Shades of the Civil War and the period reaching back towards the Revolution, and other unreadable from the erosive years. There appear such names as solid as the foundation of which this country was built — DeWitt, O'Neil, Eckert, Cole. The list reads on. They are all here — crying out in silent protest at the hustling, bustling, disadainful world — just inches away — trampling about their lifeless bones.

The dream continues. Could it be imaginary? Could it just be possible that in this Bicentennial year that the Committee might take notice — might see fit to acknowledge these honored dead — many being veterans in their own right of our country's cause — to assure them of a small part in celebrating the 200 years of gratitude by perhaps placing them on a pedestal as it were?

Oh yes, the murky mist seems to be getting clearer. Could the heirs be searched out? Could steps be taken to eliminate the ravage and disorder of this hallowed ground and to bring some semblance of respect to these honored dead? Yes, there seems to be a spark — a number of acquiescent thoughts shuffling around in X number of minds, not only to eliminate the broken stones above their bones but to prevent further desecrating causes.

The dream becomes quite clear now and begins to unfold in its finality. Here is a beautiful little sector that could be utilized by the young as well as the old in tribute to the ages. In substance it would become a neighborhood park — a monument in itself — just off the teeming highways and byways. To eliminate the prevalence of vandalism of the grave stones, my dream sees a removal of most of them and erected in their stead a single well-situated and suitable monument dedicated to all the hallowed occupants.

There would be a section for the young to play in respect and harmony, and there would be a sector for the elderly to stroll and rest. Now once more the current little eyesore — this grubby looking place could regain respect in the community as in days of yore and become a district asset to the City of Kingston as it takes part in celebrating our country's liberty under the Grace of God.

Well, a body can dream, can't he?

Reservoir Building

Editor, The Freeman:

The Ashokan Waters works is visited by many people, but do they know or do they observe the large building dedicated to the late Benjamin C. Nesin? Who was Benjamin C. Nesin?

From the "THE Pipeline" published by the Department of Water Supply, Gas, and Electricity, of New York City, March 15, 1964, we read:

"We mourn the loss on January 28, 1964, of Benjamin C. Nesin, Director of Laboratories of our Department.

Mr. Nesin was appointed as Chemist in 1927. He was chemist in charge of the Mt. Prospect Laboratory from 1931 to 1945. In 1945, he was appointed Director of Laboratories.

His was the responsibility for water treatment and water supply safety for our Department. Among his varied duties were: directed five laboratories, control of water supply and sewage treatment plants, responsible for all problems of water supply toxicology and in general all matters related to the safety and general quality of the New York City water supply system. He established the present system of watershed control of pollution and contamination, and conducted investigations on the toxicological problems concerned with water supply. These included the control of herbicidal and insecticidal materials which may be discharged upon watersheds, methods for screening watersheds for toxic agents, the rapid determination of arsenic, lead, nerve poisons, war gases, and other deleterious materials in water supplies, the use of guppies as test animals in water supply toxicology, etc. He was the Author of many departmental reports on the subject of fluoridation.

He was a member of the American Water Works Association, Long Island Water Conference, New England Water Works Association, Biological Stain Commission, American Public Health Association, New York Academy of Science, National Association of Corrosion Engineers. Mr. Nesin was one of the ranking members of the Interdepartmental board for the Sanitary Control and Protection of the Public Water Supply.

These are but the bare facts. No mention is made of his trip to Israel at the invitation of that government to help Israel with its water supply problems. No mention is made of the respect lavished upon him by his fellow members in the department and his associates in the various societies. "Over my dead body, will they fluoridate New York City Water." This statement was made by Mr. Nesin, and indeed, New York City Water was fluoridated the year following his death. His discourse on fluoridation is available to anyone who wishes it at my home, 43 Stephan Street, Kingston, N.Y.

'Look What I Found'

Inside Report

A Wayward Bus

By Rowland Evans
and Robert Novak

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Long before Sen. George McGovern arrived here Sunday to exploit polarization of the Democratic party on forced school busing, it was unmistakably clear that even among advanced liberals the mood was surprisingly hostile to any such confrontation.

Consequently, the most powerful political operatives at the three-day "issues conference" put on by liberal Democrats (many of whom backed McGovern in 1972) felt betrayed by McGovern's ideological foray. If, as most Democrats here assumed, McGovern was trying to recapture the party's left in preparation for another presidential campaign, his busing speech set off a harsh backlash that is having the opposite effect.

Indeed, meticulous efforts had been made by organizers of the issues conference to avoid just the sort of party quarrel that McGovern set off with his emotional appeal for his party not to "sell its soul" on busing. "The one thing we didn't want were political harangues from either presidential candidates or activists on the floor," one conference sponsor told us before McGovern's inflammatory busing speech.

Moreover, McGovern had been specifically asked not to raise the busing issue, both by Democratic politicians here in Louisville, now being tortured by a busing crisis, and by politicians sponsoring the conference — including at least one official of the left-oriented United Auto Workers (UAW).

Irresponsible
"He was forewarned," a top UAW political operative told us. "What he did was totally and completely irresponsible. He did a disservice to the Democratic party, and if he really intends to make an effort for the nomination next year he will never get any support from anyone in this union."

But McGovern was not here for the first two days of what — before his onslaught — had been developing into a low-key, almost sporadic liberal talkfest. He did not know, or did not care, that liberal union activists — mostly from the UAW and the machinists union — were anything but enthusiastic about an issues conference that risked opening the bloody wounds of 1972.

Nor was such moderation limited to delegates on the floor at the Louisville Gardens. Signs of change within the Democratic party were also unmistakable from the speaker's platform, where liberal Democratic officeholders, past and present, gingerly stepped around ideological potholes.

An example was Mayor Kenneth Gibson of Newark, black leader of a city where 90 per cent of school children are black. Gibson appealed not for busing (saying Newark's blacks are against it), but for a return to basic education "so that our children can go forward to where this country used to be in education techniques."

Similarly, on another issue sacred to Democratic liberals — national health insurance — a certified liberal, former Gov. John J. Gilligan of Ohio, stunned his audience by coming out against any nationwide health insurance program.

"In the decade since medicare and medicaid appeared, we have poured billions into the health care delivery systems of this country" without much result, Gilligan said.

Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts, a liberal who took office last January, lamented "the failing Great Society programs" built on the presumed power of Washington to solve all problems. To the contrary, Dukakis said, the place for more government lies in the town, county and state, not in the nation's capital with its remote, all-powerful bureaucracy.

Perhaps the most down-to-earth change in liberal Democratic politics of 1976 as contrasted to McGovernite confrontation politics of 1972 came from a UAW official in regular and intimate touch with political sentiments in his union, whose rank-and-file is considerably less liberal than its leadership. He swept his arm over the conference and spat out an expletive to us: "We don't need an issues conference today because every good Democrat knows there is only one issue, and that is jobs, jobs and jobs."

In Their Own Way
One after another, each of the presidential candidates who showed up here said the same thing in his own way, steering away from the ideological masochism that wrecked their party in 1972.

But George McGovern tried to change the mood, thundering his demand for ideological purity on busing as an overture for offering himself once again as a sacrificial nominee to assure that purity is achieved. There were few takers here in Louisville. Even this liberal conference wanted to get out from under the long, self-destructive shadow of 1972.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Grisly Tactics On Rosenbergs

By Jack Anderson with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Newly released documents have revived interest in the case of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, who were executed for espionage 22 years ago. But still buried is the stark story of how the FBI plotted to wring a confession from Julius by executing his wife first.

It was the FBI's grisly hope that Julius, horrified by the trauma of his wife's death and his own impending electrocution, would blurt out a last-minute confession.

The late FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover was worried about public doubts that the Rosenbergs were guilty, doubts that still stubbornly persist. Hoover wanted a dramatic, 11th-hour confession to clear up the doubts.

The FBI was convinced, according to our sources, that the Rosenbergs not only were guilty but that the strong-willed Ethel was preventing her weaker husband from confessing.

Indeed, the FBI had learned from Julius Rosenberg's cellmate, a secret FBI informer, that he had admitted guilt. The informer's reputation for credibility, however, was uncertain, so the second-hand confession couldn't be used.

The FBI needed an admission from Julius' own lips. An attempt was made, therefore, to make sure Ethel went to the electric chair first. An agent was standing by, with an open line to Washington, ready to relay the first words of the stunned husband's confession.

But the FBI was unable to change the execution schedule. Julius was executed first, then his wife 10 minutes later. Neither gave a dying confession.

DOUBLE AGENT? Daniel Rathbun may be the most valuable double-agent in the history of corporate intrigue. Or he may be an innocent, unwise in the ways of public perceptions.

In any event, his story is a fascinating one.

Rathbun headed up perhaps the most crucial government study in a decade: how much oil and gas is really available in the United States. The study will be a basis for many far-reaching domestic and foreign policy decisions.

The need for such a study was obvious. In the past, the government had only the word of the oil and gas industry. And their word on oil and gas reserves, it was suspected, was heavily influenced by the profit motive. No one was really sure whether there was an energy crisis, or whether the industry was simply holding out for higher prices.

So Congress authorized the study in 1973, and Daniel Rathbun was placed in direct command. Early last month, the study was completed. It gave the industry a clean bill of health, assuring that the figures compiled by the American Petroleum Institute were essentially accurate.

Now here's the rub. Daniel Rathbun has turned up on the American Petroleum Institute payroll. This is a little like a judge going to work for a man he just declared not guilty; it raises doubts about the integrity of the verdict.

Rathbun and his former employers at the Federal Energy Administration hotly deny any impropriety. Eric Zausner, Rathbun's former boss at FEA, claims that Rathbun could not have influenced the study on behalf of industry because it was "locked in cement" over a year ago.

One FEA official confided, nevertheless, that Energy Czar Frank Zarb "hit the roof" when he heard of Rathbun's defection to industry.

They point out that the questionnaires sent out by Rathbun to oil and gas producers were heavily influenced by the American Petroleum Institute. Consumer groups were allowed to make suggestions only after they kicked up their heels. But in the end, many of their suggestions were included in the crucial questionnaire.

To make matters even stickier, Rathbun himself has been neither a saint nor a sinner in anyone's eyes while a public servant. Some of his decisions as a deputy assistant administrator have angered consumer groups, and some have angered the industry. Everyone agrees he is a top-flight statistician.

Rathbun himself told our associate Jack Cloherty that he sees no conflict since he will not be involved in data collection at the API.

But Rathbun's move to industry casts a shadow over the government's "independent" oil and gas reserve findings.

An Awesome Open Secret

The generals in the Pentagon say that Israel has one good war left in her. After that — what? The holocaust? I doubt it. There are military whispers that Israel has nuclear weapons.

It is called an "open secret." If so, it is one that Henry Kissinger hasn't told us. One of the ironies in the life of our butterfly Secretary of State is that the more problems he solves, the more he is held in suspicion here and abroad.

In press conferences, he is as coy as a sex fiend in a convent. He seldom reveals his intentions. Most of us who listen subtract what he says from what he didn't say and try to reach a quotient.

If little Israel is a nuclear power, Kissinger would do well to explain it to the Arab world. Goliath should know that David now has a slingshot of awesome proportions. In any diplomatic game, hydrogen bombs are the ace of trump.

'Just Models'
The last time I sat with General Itzhak Rabin in an innocent-looking, vine-covered cottage near Tel Aviv, he had a bookcase laden with missile models. I asked if Israel had the big ones. "Just models," he said modestly.

It seemed embarrassing that a grown man would collect toys. The playthings have matured. They are standing in hidden fields — deadly asparagus. They also hang from the wings of bombers.

This alters the balance of power in the Middle East. Thirty-eight million Moslems have the oil and the money. Three million people have the power to destroy the Arab world.

Such destruction could easily include the oil fields of Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and Iran. This, in turn, would bring Western civilization to a screeching halt. No oil — no industry.

In such circumstances it is difficult to understand why, in the past two years, American and European public opinion has turned away from Israel. The swing is more than a modified anti-Israel stance. It is pro-Arab. The West has drenched itself in crude oil.

The Rabin government will not announce its nuclear capability — assuming Israel has it — because such weapons are a vice as well as a virtue. The unwritten rule in the nuclear club is, "He who has them must not use them."

Tactically they are worth a lot solely as a threat. The U.S. and the U.S.S.R. have poured scores of billions into such weapons as a ghastly presence. If one button is pressed accidentally, if one bird flies the night skies to another nation, Mother Earth will be reduced to a floating dark cinder.

Each has the power of overkill; each knows that it can not be used. This leads to a question: Under what circumstances would Israel use atom and hydrogen bombs? Perhaps if its people were being pushed into the sea.

If it happened, radioactive dust would sweep the world between the 30th and 20th parallels and scores of millions of people would die. Thus the question reverts from the strategic to the moral. Has any nation the right to kill millions of innocents in other lands?

Peace or Perish?

No. Could it happen? Yes. Could it be prevented? Of course. If those muscular big brothers, the U.S.S.R. and the U.S.A. would sit together and hammer out a final peace for Israeli and Arab, and impose it on the Middle East, the several nations could revert to industrial pursuits.

Sooner, rather than later, the Arab oil billions will buy nuclear weapons. They have both the money and the hate. Saudi Arabia can make an offer which no one can refuse. It is in the interest of America and Russia to seek peace in the Middle East now.

Will they? No. One assumes that Gerald Ford comprehends less than what Henry Kissinger tells him. The President's most recent gesture was to endorse sending 200 Americans to stand in no-man's-land between the Egyptian and Israeli forces. This is akin to sending a boy armed with a water pistol to fight a fire in a dynamite factory.

It no longer matters who is pro-Israel and who is pro-Arab. Peace in the Middle East is of paramount importance to my country, the United States of America.

Montessori School Coming to Kingston

KINGSTON
A new nursery school and kindergarten, the Mid-Hudson Montessori Children's House, located in St. James United Methodist Church on Pearl and Fair Streets, Kingston, will hold an open house Tuesday, Dec. 9 at 8 p.m. The purpose of the meeting will be to introduce parents of young children to Montessori methods and materials by way of demonstration and film.

The Children's House, named after Maria Montessori's own Casa Dei Bambini in Rome at the turn of the century, will continue the spirit of the great educator. Children's House director, Robert Murphy, a Montessori-trained teacher, feels that the essential insights of Montessori are just as valid today in America as they were in Rome 70 years ago. "In fact," says Murphy, "her conviction that the pre-school years are crucially important to children's development through all the learning years is now supported by educators and some psychologists who believe that 85 per cent of a child's intelligence is formed by age five."

The Children's House will begin its program in January. Enrollment and registration information will be provided at the open house. More information may be obtained by contacting the school.

St. Nicholas and Black Peter Pageant to Unfold at Old Dutch

KINGSTON
Carrying on a tradition that was begun more than 25 years ago, Old Dutch Church will once again bring the true story of Saint Nicholas and his small friend, Black Peter, to residents of Kingston and the surrounding area Friday, Dec. 5 at 7 p.m.

The festivities begin with Saint Nicholas and Black Peter riding down Wall Street, and arriving at the churchyard at the corner of Wall and Main Streets. There, they will be greeted by a typical Dutch family in authentic costume. The story of the real "Santa Claus" will be told to the children. The Dutch family will be portrayed by members of the congregation, Mr. and Mrs. Hank Rosier and their children.

For those viewing the scene, the story will be read by the Rev. Abraham DeVries, dominie of the historic church. Special music also will be provided to add a festive note to this occasion.

Saint Nicholas will be riding a white horse which has been provided by Chris Day from the Woodstock Stables.

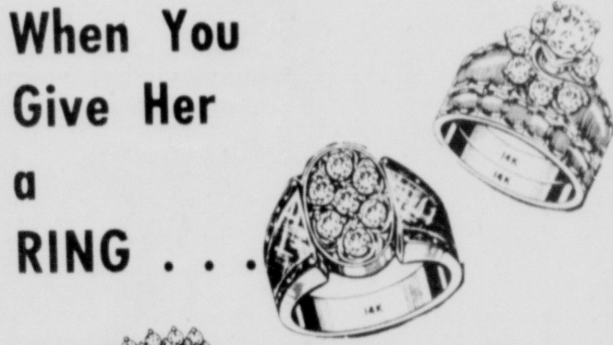

The many lovely tales told of the saintly Bishop who arrives in a red Bishop's robe and his white beard have been handed down for centuries, and so it is that children look forward to his greeting, and gifts of candy for all those young ones who have been especially good throughout the year.

The public is invited to attend this joyous event.

Sharing Their Blessings At Thanksgiving

Students of the Kingston Catholic School have good feelings these days after last Thursday's Thanksgiving celebration. Before these students enjoyed their own feast, however, they prepared baskets of Thanksgiving treats for some of the less fortunate in our area. Here Amy Ambrose (L), Larry Johnson, Erik Dunn, Kim Glasser and Jacqueline Dempsey join in filling the baskets for the needy. The entire student body of the school presented the food items at the offertory of the Mass in a special liturgy celebrated at St. Peter's Church with the Rev. Msgr. Francis P. Brennan, pastor of the church, officiating. The Rev. Patrick Woods and the Rev. Mark Lidinsky of Mt. St. Alphonsus celebrated at the services. (Freeman photo)

Reader's Theatre Program Set at UCCC

STONE RIDGE
Rhoda R. Mones, chairperson of the Department of Speech and Theater at Ulster County Community College, has announced plans for the Fall semester program of Reader's Theatre.

The program, to be presented by the Oral Interpretation class, will take place Thursday, Dec. 11, at 2 p.m. in the College Lounge in Vanderlyn Hall on the Stone Ridge campus.

The focus of the original Reader's Theatre performance, which is presented each semester, is on a central theme put together, from a variety of sources, by the students as a class project. The theme and the title of the script is a "well-guarded" secret until the week of the program.

Mrs. Mones, the instructor for Oral Interpretation, reported that this semester's Reader's Theatre will be different in that it will be presented in the College Lounge with a comfortable fire burning, egg nog being served and holiday carols sung.

Pam Lachmann, of Saugerties, a student of the class, reported that an order has been placed for snow on Dec. 11, but she couldn't guarantee anything.

In addition to Ms. Lachmann, the students of Oral Interpretation and the performers of Reader's Theatre are:

Anna Benker, Kingston; Desiree Berg, West Hurley; Judi Booth, Kingston; Gary Cannon, Nanapanoch; Jo Ann M. Cicale, Kingston; Susan

Hassa, Stone Ridge; Peter Hepburn, Nanapanoch; Richard Hermance, Tillson; Gina Linehan, Kingston; Christopher Mable, Port Ewen; Julie Meehan, Kerhonkson; Lynne Millson, Stone Ridge; Jon Perry, Kingston; Kathy Piccirello, Woodstock; Jennifer Sheridan, New Paltz and Tom White, Kingston.

The program is open to the public, free of charge.

Country-Bluegrass Singer Headed Here

KINGSTON

"To be happy with myself, and, to make something of myself," are two goals Navy Musician First Class Tensel Parker of the United States Navy Band's Country Current has set for herself.

As the first woman country-bluegrass vocalist in the Navy, Tensel has certainly made something of herself as she moves with the "Current." Across the country on behalf of Navy recruiting, singing the music she knows best — country-bluegrass.

Tensel Parker will be in this area on Tuesday, Dec. 9, making appearances with the U. S. Navy Band's seven-member musical group — first in a program at Saugerties High School from 10 to 11 o'clock in the morning and then at Kingston High School in a 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. performance.

Tensel, a native of Elkins, West Virginia, enlisted in the Navy June 11, 1973 and on the following day joined the military's only country-bluegrass group.

Music was important to the West Virginia native early in her life. At the age of 10, she was studying piano and the next year began voice lessons.

The talented young vocalist gives added dimensions and style to the sounds of the Country Current, and to hear her sing, one knows she is happy with herself and on the road to success.

Saugerties and Kingston music lovers are sure to attest to the talents of this Navy miss during her local appearances.

Host Group Seeks Area Participants

NEW YORK
Ulster County area families are needed to host English-speaking European visitors as guests in their homes for a 10-day period during 1976, it was announced today by the American Host Foundation.

American Host is one of the few non-governmental programs designed to show the American way of life to foreign visitors by pairing them with American families, and has been endorsed by the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration as a nationwide home hospitality program for the bicentennial year.

Now in its 15th year, American Host has opened doors to better understanding for more than 9,000 European visitors who have passed on their new understanding of America to their colleagues and friends.

Being a "Host Family" is open to anyone who has the desire to increase understanding and friendship between Americans and Europeans. Host Families are required to provide a private room, meals for their guest, the opportunity to meet their friends and neighbors and to see places of interest in the area.

American Host arranges all transportation. Host Families are asked to meet their guest upon arrival in their area. Visitors and Host Families have an opportunity to correspond for at least a month before meeting.

Arrangements for participating as a Host Family may be made by writing to:

Art Show Now at Library

JEAN WROLSEN

TOWN OF ULSTER
Artwork by Jean Wrolsen of High Woods went view today for a month at The Town of Ulster Library.

Predominately a black and white show, mainly drawings, it is strong on contrasts and varied in techniques. Pen, brush, ink; soft pencil, enduring wax or Conte' crayon and French charcoal, are used with precision and obvious enjoyment. The public is invited to view the exhibit during December.

Library hours are 2 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, 7 to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and on Saturday from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m.

The artist-author was born in Maryland. She first studied at Corcoran, the Art Students League of New York and with Harvey Fite. For 10 years, she was registrar of the summer school of the Art Students League at Woodstock. She has since returned there to study with Franklin Alexander and Bernard Steffen.

A wall of her work was presented in an invitational show at the Woodstock Artists Association last spring. She tutors in drawing at her Highwoods home, and writes poetry, to which, she says, her drawings are a quiet accompaniment. They exist in many private collections. Works are for sale.

Jean Wrolsen is the author of Lambs of The Catskills, a book of gentle verse.

Dear Abby Says:

Former Fatty Catches a Lifeline

DEAR ABBY: I send this letter out of gratitude for recommending Overeaters Anonymous. It saved my life. In December 1973 I weighed 326 pounds. If my high blood pressure or heart trouble wouldn't eventually have killed me, I'd have done it myself. I lived with loneliness, depression and despair.

I was a heroin addict and a 23-year-old divorced mother of three on welfare. I hated myself enough to prostitute my body to get money for dope. I suffered humiliation after humiliation. (A 300-pound prostitute gets all the sadists and pervers to no other hooker will take.) I had no self-respect, no hope, no God—nothing.

I wrote to you, never expecting an answer. Your letter was the first word of encouragement I had had in years. I took your advice and went to an O.A. meeting in June of '74. I believed none of it. "These people are crazy," I thought. "I'm a fat, ugly junkie, and they're telling me I can get thin and regain my self-respect if I want to!"

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

"No way," I told them right out loud. No one threw me out. A beautiful, middle aged man put his arm around my shoulder and said, "Come back and listen. Try us for 30 days. What can you lose?"

I didn't believe him, but I went back and back and back. Today I've lost 121 pounds, and I'm still losing. I'm drug free, and I'm learning to like myself. I have a responsible job, a belief in a power greater than myself, and the love and respect of my children and people who believe in me when I didn't believe in myself.

There is no scale at O.A. They don't shame you if you backslide. They are a group of loving, caring, supportive people who are there to help you because they have been helped themselves.

After sinking so low, O.A. gave me a chance to be what I've always wanted to be: a lady.

How can I thank you for sending me there?
"BORN AGAIN" IN GROTON, CONN.

DEAR BORN AGAIN: You owe me no thanks. I merely threw you a lifeline. You caught it.

DEAR ABBY: I am 14-years-old and need your help. My girl friend's mother lets her kids call her "Rosemary." I think that's neat.

I tried calling my mon "Shirley," and I nearly got a hit the head.

How can I get my mon to get with it like my girl friend's mother?

SANDY

DEAR SANDY: If by "getting with it," you mean she should allow you to call her by her first name, I can't help you. Respect your mother's right to be addressed according to her wishes. If you have children and want them to call you

A Joyeux Noel Gala Dec. 20

ANNANDALE-ON-HUDSON Blithewood Manor at Bard College will be the site of a Joyeux Noel Gala for the benefit of the Northern Dutchess Day Care Center, Inc., a United Way agency, on Saturday, Dec. 20, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Susan B. Davis, chairlady of the benefit, has announced that music for dancing will be provided by Gerald Boice and his band. Ticket information may be obtained from Mrs. Paul Velardi.

The Northern Dutchess Day Care Center has been providing excellent child care for children of the Red Hook-Rhinebeck area for five years. The present director of the center is Ralph Roe, a graduate of SUNY at New Paltz. He has been with the center for four years. In a recent interview Roe described what sets Northern Dutchess Day Care Center apart from many other centers. A qualified staff, including three certified teachers, offers a child-centered approach out into the community, free choice of activities, and multi-age grouping provide to children with a happy, stimulating experience. In addition the center provides flexible hours and has the lowest rates for day care in the county.

However, like many agencies, special needs and more innovative programs would benefit greatly from a greater income to the center. The board anticipates that this benefit will provide the additional funds to enable the center to offer more scholarships and supply needed books for the library, more audio-visual equipment, and money to pay work study students from various local colleges.

In addition, Roe and the board are interested in parent-community educational programs which would involve an even greater circle of people in the programs and activities offered by the center.

Northern Dutchess Day Care Center is regarded a valuable community resource and the public is invited to attend the benefit gala in support of it.

Man Once Thought Helpless Aids the Handicapped

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The new director of California's state Department of Rehabilitation is shaking up the agency which once turned away thousands of severely handicapped persons, including himself.

Edward V. Roberts, 36, a quadriplegic named to the $34,104-a-year post by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., has ordered that the department turn its priorities upside down to "help the people who really need it."

Roberts says the department now will give first priority for vocational rehabilitation services to the severely disabled in contrast to what he says was its past practice of concentrating services on persons with minor disabilities.

"We (severely disabled) were considered vegetables a few years ago," Roberts said. "The vegetables now are rising. We want to show that severely disabled persons can take charge of their own lives."

The department's mission is to help make physically and mentally handicapped persons more employable by providing special training, medical services and special appliances, such as artificial limbs.

Since the state vocational rehabilitation program was started 54 years ago, more than 200,000 handicapped persons have been rehabilitated into jobs in California. Eighty per cent of the department's costs are met by federal funds.

Roberts, an easy-going man who exudes a contagious enthusiasm about his new job, lost the use of his arms and legs at age 14 because of polio.

He said his appointment as rehabilitation director in October marked the first time a quadriplegic had been named to a high-level position in either government or business.

He was co-founder and executive director of the Center for Independent Living, a Berkeley organization operated by the disabled to aid other disabled persons. He said the center became a "national model" for similar programs.

Roberts said the department "traditionally has played a statistical game" by aiding persons with easily remedied handicaps because it would produce statistics showing a high rate of success with little effort or expense.

"And routinely, people like myself, who had the most need, were rejected as unfeasible," said Roberts, adding the department considered such cases "more difficult and costly."

Roberts said he refused to be rejected and "fought his way into the system."

However, he said, thousands of people were turned down by the department over the years because the agency declared the severely disabled could not be rehabilitated due to the seriousness of their handicaps.

Roberts, who is confined to a wheelchair, said with help the severely disabled can overcome their handicaps and lead self-sufficient lives.

"The time has come," he said, "for disabled people to be recognized for their strengths — strengths that come from overcoming a severe disability and becoming independent."

Under Roberts' new policy, only disabled persons with moderate to severe disabilities will receive vocational rehabilitation services from the department. The policy won't affect persons already receiving services from the department.

The highest priority will go to those in the severely disabled category, including the blind, deaf, quadriplegics, persons suffering from severe cases of orthopedic, epileptic, cardiac, circulatory, respiratory and mental impairment and multiple sclerosis and muscular dystrophy.

Roberts said his appointment as rehabilitation director should encourage the disabled that they, too, can succeed. He said it also should help convince employers to hire the handicapped.

"I'm no super hero," he said. "When I was 14 I was totally dependent. I went through a lot of levels to improve myself. I took charge of my own life. I found out I had a brain."

Skillful Moscow Thieves Steal Anything Wheeled

MOSCOW (UPI) — Lock your car doors, comrade. Don't park on dark streets or lose your vehicle registration papers, either.

Gangs of car thieves are operating in Moscow. With cars increasingly common in a city that had few private vehicles only a decade ago, the car theft problem has become so serious that police set up a special department to deal with it.

This unusual disclosure was made recently by the government newspaper Izvestia, which as a rule follows the Soviet practice of playing up crime in the West while all but denying its existence at home.

Statistics on the growth of car thievery in the Soviet Union are not available. Izvestia just said that a special police unit had been established "to improve efficiency in preventing this sort of crime."

Yet official concern clearly is reflected both by the need authorities felt to create the new department and by their decision to publicize the struggle against one highly successful robber band.

How did the gang operate? Much the same as its Western counterparts.

There were 12 men in all, each an "expert." One was a document forger, another the actual thief. A distinguished-looking gang member acted as the bogus "owner" when stolen cars were being sold. Others acted as go-betweens or drivers.

"Sometimes they stole a car spontaneously, just when they saw it," Izvestia said. "Sometimes they would search entire areas of the city to find a car with exactly the right color."

The stolen vehicle would be hidden while the forger, named Silivonov, prepared "clean" registration papers and other documents.

Then — in a city where buying a new car requires a wait of a year or more — the sale was no problem.

In one case, Izvestia said, the gang sold an old black Volga Sedan, which retails new for $11,920, to two brothers from Uzbekistan for $15,900.

Before police managed to track them down, the gang snatched 18 cars and disposed of them all successfully.

But private cars — there are only about 150,000 of them in Moscow — are not the only target for thieves. Izvestia said taxis, trucks, motorcycles, buses and even mobile cranes are fair game.

Col. Mikhail Klukov, a member of the new bureau, blamed "drunkards" and thrillseekers for most of the thefts, which he said were "a stairway to the prisoner's dock because sooner or later practically every stolen vehicle is found."

In the case of the Silivonov gang, the penalty was severe. Izvestia said he was jailed for 14 years and his accomplices for no less than three years each.

Same Old Story for Raiders

By UPI

It's the same old story for the Oakland Raiders — another division title and another tough road to the Super Bowl. The Raiders clinched the AFC's West Division title in the National Football League Sunday when they scored a 37-34 overtime victory over the Atlanta Falcons on a dramatic field goal by 48-year old George Blanda.

But to Oakland management, players and fans the reaction was: so far, so good but also so what?

The Raiders have won four straight division titles and eight in nine years but remain the prime examples that the road to the Super Bowl is filled with pitfalls. The Raiders have gone on to play in only one Super Bowl and were wiped out in that one, 33-14, by the Green Bay Packers.

This time around, the Raiders face the prospect of having to win over two teams with superior records during the season — the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Minnesota Vikings, both now 10-1 compared to Oakland's 9-2 record.

The defending Super Bowl champion Steelers ran their winning streak to a club record nine games with a 20-7 triumph over the New York

Jets Sunday while the Vikings also have a 10-1 mark despite a 31-30 loss to the Washington Redskins. At the moment the records favor the Steelers and Vikings to meet again in the Super Bowl with the Raiders watching on television.

"Then you worry about whom you play and where. We have passed the first obstacle, but there's a long way to go. Of course, our goal is the Super Bowl. Nothing else counts."

Blanda kicked an 18-yard field goal with three seconds

the Vikings their first loss of the season and keep their own playoff hopes alive.

Packers 28 Bears 7

John Brockington scored on three runs from inside the 10-yard line as the Packers scored an easy win over the Bears. The Packers led 28-0 at halftime and stifled both the Bears' passing and running attacks.

Eagles 27 49ers 17

Mike Boryla threw touchdown passes of five, 11 and 42 yards leading the Eagles to their third win in 11 games. Boryla's 42-yarder to Charlie Young clinched the game for the Eagles in the fourth period. Horst Muhlmann started the Eagles' scoring with field goals of 51 and 42 yards.

Browns 17 Saints 16

Greg Pruitt ran eight yards for a touchdown and Don Cockroft kicked the extra point with 3:12 to play giving the Browns their second straight victory and leaving both they and the Saints with 2-9 records.

Broncos 13 Chargers 10

Jim Turner kicked a 25-yard field goal in sudden-death overtime as the Broncos handed the Chargers their 11th straight defeat. The winning field goal was set up when Chris Fletcher was called for pass interference on a John Hufnagel to Jack Dolbin pass at the San Diego 20.

The Cincinnati Bengals defeated the Houston Oilers 23-19, the Baltimore Colts beat the Kansas City Chiefs 28-14, the Green Bay Packers blitzed the Chicago Bears 28-7, the Dallas Cowboys topped the New York Giants 14-3, the Philadelphia Eagles downed the San Francisco 49ers 27-17, the Cleveland Browns shaded the New Orleans Saints 17-16, and the Denver Broncos nipped the San Diego Chargers 13-10 in other Sunday games.

Ken Stabler threw four touchdown passes, three to Cliff Branch, for the Raiders while Steve Bartkowski threw for one TD and ran for another for the Falcons.

Redskins 31 Vikings 30

Bill Kilmer completed four passes for a total of 77 yards, including a 15-yard payoff toss to Frank Grant, and Mark Moseley kicked the gamewinning extra point for the Redskins with 40 seconds left in the game. game played in a driving rain at Cincinnati. The passes covered 34 and 18 yards to Chip Myers. Dan Pastorini's touchdown pass cut the Oilers' deficit to 16-10 in the third period but the Bengals scored again in the fourth period on Stan Fritts' four-yard run, offsetting two late scores by Houston. Colts 28 Chiefs 14

The Colts rolled to their sixth straight victory as Lydell Mitchell ran for 160 yards, including a 70-yard scoring dash to hand the Chiefs their sixth loss in 11 games. Mitchell's running boosted his season total to 889. The victory enabled the Colts to remain in contention with the Dolphins and Bills for the AFC's East Division title.

Steelers Treated Jets Like Routine Chore

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Pittsburgh Steelers treated their game against the New York Jets Sunday like a bothersome chore, something that had to be taken care of before moving on to more important things.

But even an uninspired Steeler club was too much for the Jets as Terry Bradshaw threw two touchdown passes, his career-high 14th and 15th of the year, and Roy Gerela added two field goals in a 20-7 victory. The Jets, in fact, were shut out until 3:55 remained and Joe Namath, who was intercepted four times, threw a six-yard TD pass to Jerome Barkum.

The Steelers thus ran their winning streak to a club record nine games and are 10-1 overall. The loss was a club record eighth straight for the Jets and their ninth in 11 games.

Mel Blount was the defensive star for Pittsburgh, picking off his ninth and 10th interceptions of the season and moving to within four of the league record set in 1952 by Dick "Night Train" Lane.

But even Blount confessed it wasn't a great effort.

"We played about as good as we had to," said Blount. "But I think I probably had more fun out there today than in any game all year. I got a lot of action my way. I had good receivers playing opposite me and we were up against a big name quarterback."

The Steelers, sluggish at the outset, struggled to a 10-0 lead. Namath underthrew a wideopen Eddie Bell at the goal line from the Steeler 31 and Glen Edwards intercepted and returned 46 yards to the Steeler 48. Bradshaw took them to the nine and Gerela kicked a 26-yard field goal.

Blount's interception in the end zone gave Pittsburgh the ball on its 20 and Bradshaw took them in for their first touchdown in six plays, eluding a charge by defensive tackle Carl Barzilauskas and hitting Franco Harris along the right sideline. Harris took it in from the 20 to complete a 44-yard play and mark his first TD reception since his muchpublicized deflection catch against Oakland in the 1971 playoffs.

Pittsburgh boosted its lead to 17-0 on its first possession in the second half as Bradshaw hit Frank Lewis on an eight-yard TD pass to cap a 51-yard drive. Blount's second interception set up the last score, Gerela's 19-yard field goal.

"We were very loose, very relaxed, very confident," said Bradshaw. "We tried to just execute and get the hell out of there. I blame a lot of the poor passing on the weather. The wind was really blowing. The wind defeated me in the first half — it affected my passing — but in the second half, I decided to not let myself be bothered. I went into the third quarter determined to throw and not let it bother me."

While Bradshaw went to a short passing game to avoid the wind, Namath could not afford such a luxury and thus had four interceptions, running his league-leading total to 26.

"The wind was really tough," Namath said. "It was like throwing against a wall. But I had to go up top. Their linebackers nearly killed Steve Davis when we tried a swing pass and their line clogged up the middle so much we had to put it up. The problem was that it wasn't a consistent wind. It swirled around and made it difficult to judge."

The Marshall Plan

Redskins' quarterback Billy Kilmer (17) is caught for a seven yard loss to his 29 yard line in the fourth quarter by Minnesota's linemen Jim Marshall (70). Kilmer was called for grounding the football on the play, but the Skins went on to win, 31-30. (UPI)

Telly's Nag Big Winner

SAN MATEO, Calif. (UPI) — "It's a funny thing about horse racing, you get into it for laughs and you wind up either as happy as I am or broke. There is no middle ground."

That was actor Telly Savalas' self analysis Saturday, minutes after he had watched his horse, Telly's Pop, race off to an impressive 1-1/2 length victory in the $114,000 California Juvenile Stakes at Bay Meadows and thereby become the first winner of the Western Triple Crown for two-year-olds.

"I bought a piece of the horse from my good friend Howard Koch only because he named him for me," Savalas said. "Not for a minute did I think something was going to come of the deal. I got into it strictly for laughs and I wanted to humor Howard."

Howard Koch is a movie and television director and longtime friend of Savalas and actor Walter Matthau, who is into horse racing on a more serious level than Savalas.

Savalas, better known as Kojak to television viewers, said he was so impressed by Telly's Pop that he was all for selling him after he won his first race.

"That shows you how much I know about horse racing and horses," Savalas said. "That's why I've always believed this is no sport for amateurs. Me, I can't be that serious about it, baby. For me it has to be for laughs."

Savalas was laughing while Matthau was ready to slit his throat after Telly's Pop won Saturday's race here to push his earnings for five victories in six starts to $248,507, a record for a California two-year-old. Matthau was unhappy because only a month ago Savalas offered him a share of the horse and was turned down.

"Telly and Howard are great guys and I'm happy for them," said Matthau. "Sure, I'm sorry I didn't buy in when I had a chance. This horse convinced me after this race he has a chance to win an awful lot of money before he's through. Too bad he's been gelded or he could have made even more money in stud."

Telly's Pop won the Del Mar Futurity and the Norfolk Stakes at Santa Anita earlier for the first two legs of the baby Triple Crown. In the Cal Juvenile, he was backed down to odds-on by a season-record crowd of 18,725, which wagered a single race record of $326,295 and a single day record of $2,315,505, and he didn't disappoint any of his supporters.

Imacornishprince, given the best chance to upset Telly's Pop in the pre-race forecasts, put out the pace for a mile of the mile and one-sixteenth race before falling back.

Telly's Pop was held off the pace by Francisco Mena until the final bend when he was asked to run. And that's exactly what he did, picking up four horses on the turn and then grabbing the lead at the head of the stretch. It was no contest from that point on.

Bold Impulse finished second, another 1-1/4 lengths ahead of Double Dealer with Telly's Pop going the distance in 1:42 flat and paying $3.80 to win.

Is Savalas ready to sell his share in Telly's Pop now? "Never baby," he replied with a big smile. "This horse is going to take care of my old age."

Dallas Paid Top Price

IRVING, Tex. (UPI) — As works of art go, Sunday's New York-Dallas contest ranked right up there with a three-year-old's fingerprinting.

But even if it wasn't a Rembrandt, the Cowboys were willing to pay top price for it.

A win, after all, is a win, and the drab 14-3 decision over the offensively ineffective New York Giants Sunday made Dallas a division leader again.

The Cowboys are now deadlocked with the St. Louis Cardinals atop the NFC East with an 8-3 mark and those two teams meet next Sunday in St. Louis. The winner of that one all but certainly will own a place in the playoffs.

"We weren't mentally sharp," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "But we got this one out of the way and all the marbles are on the line next week. That's the big one."

Dallas turned a potential runaway into a reasonably close contest.

Roger Staubach hit Jean Fugett less than four minutes deep in the game with a 54-yard touchdown pass and late in the first quarter Staubach teamed with Golden Richards on a 62-yard throw that set up Doug Dennison's one-yard scoring plunge.

But that was it. The Cowboys twice threatened in the second quarter, only to have Jim Stienke twice intercept Staubach and over the final two periods, Dallas could only get close enough for one missed field goal try.

But the Cowboys' defense, which has had difficulty slowing people down all season, had an enjoyable day against former Dallas quarterback Craig Morton.

Morton was making his first trip back to Texas Stadium since being traded to New York in the midst of last season and he probably would be just as soon have stayed in Manhattan.

The Giants' quarterback could hit only eight of 24 passes for 102 yards and had three intercepted.

"I didn't play well," said Morton. "The evidence was on the field. When I don't play well, we don't win. I had a bunch of chances, we had receivers open, but I didn't get the ball to them."

New York's only score came on a 35-yard field goal by George Hunt in the first quarter.

The Giants' only other threat came early in the third quarter when New York drove to the Dallas seven-yard line, only to have Morton misread the coverage on a safety blitz and throw right into the hands of Cowboy defensive end Ed Jones.

"The fact that Craig is a former Cowboy made us play harder," said Dallas defensive tackle Jethro Pugh. "But the most important thing was that we had to win this one.

"The St. Louis game is the big one. They will be extra tough because of their loss (to Buffalo on Thanksgiving Day). They hang in there to the end and we will have to be ready."

Giants' Coach Bill Arnsparger, whose team is now 3-8, took the loss with style.

"We didn't accomplish a victory," he said. "But I feel we accomplished a lot of things as a team. I saw some things out there that I liked. Our specialty teams played well and I am pleased with that aspect."

Sports Briefs

Dolphins' Morrall On The Spot

MIAMI (UPI) — While everyone else is worrying about how 41-year-old Earl Morrall will fill in at quarterback for Miami's injured Bob Griese, Dolphins Coach Don Shula has other things on his mind.

Like what happened to the Miami running game? Or why could Baltimore run up the middle with ease in the second half of the Dolphins' surprising 33-17 loss a week ago?

"Earl looks as good to me as he ever did," Shula says of the 20-year veteran. "I think he'll hold up his end of the deal, but now we've got to get these other elements going."

Shula hopes the Dolphins (7-3) will start that task in tonight's game here against New England (3-7), as Miami hopes to stay ahead of pursuing Buffalo and Baltimore in the tight AFC Eastern Division race.

The Dolphins have averaged only 123 yards a game in their last four outings not bad by some standards, but not good enough for a team that lives by the run.

Shula has spread the blame among his players.

Mexican Cuppers Advance

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Mexico beat Canada 3-2 in their Davis Cup series Sunday and will face the United States in the next round here next month.

In the first of Sunday's final two singles, Dale Power, 26-year-old from Toronto, tied the series at 2-2 by beating Mexico's Joaquin Loyola Mayo 3-6, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4.

In the final match, Mexico's Marcelo Lara beat Rejean Genois, 22, of Loretteville, near Quebec City, 4-6, 6-2, 1-6, 6-1, 7-5.

It was the 19th meeting between the two nations in Davis Cup and the 17th victory by Mexico.

Until the last two sets of the Lara-Genois match it looked as though things would go the way of Canada, which lost Friday's opening two singles and won Saturday's doubles in the five-match series.

Change Priority For Stadium

NEW YORK (UPI) — The City of New York, in lieu of a proposed $2 million program to improve the area near Yankee Stadium, will spend $300,000 to buy equipment for the New York Yankees, it was reported today by the New York Times.

According to the Times, the original idea to upgrade the neighborhood at a cost of $2 million was abandoned as part of an economy move in the current fiscal crisis.

Instead, a portion of the money will be spent on equipment, including $215,000 for a tarpaulin, $65,000 worth of security devices, $14,000 to strengthen the supports of the scoreboard and $7,000 for a carpet or terrazzo floor for the team's general offices.

Yankee Stadium itself is in the midst of a major renovation that has caused the Yankees to play their home games in Shea Stadium the last two years. Yankee Stadium is scheduled to be ready for the 1976 season, but according to the Times, the cost of the project has risen to about $75 million, some three times the original $24 million estimate made in 1972.

Butler Wins In Colombia

BARRANQUILLA, Colombia (UPI) — Peter Butler of Great Britain shot a two-under-par 70, the best score of the day, to win the $12,000 Colombian Open golf tournament of the Caribbean coast Sunday with a four-round score of 291.

Butler held off a late challenge by Argentine veteran Roberto de Vicenzo to capture the $4,000 top prize at the Caujeral Lakes Country Club.

De Vicenzo, who shot a 71, ended up in a tie for second place with Bobby Wadkins, an American touring pro, and David Jagger, another Briton, at 292, just one stroke off the pace.

Pardon My Back

Ilie Nastase of Romania appears to be giving his back to Arthur Ashe at press conference in Stockholm Sunday following their uncompleted match in the $130,000 Masters tennis tournament. Ashe was disqualified for walking off court and Nastase for his unsportsmanlike behavior. Officials said match would be null and void and would not be replayed although both players remain in the tournament which brings together the eight most successful players on the world circuit. (UPI)

It Was Ilie Nastase's Most Un-Shining Hour

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The opening day of the $130,000 Masters Tennis Tournament erupted into chaos Sunday when both Arthur Ashe and Ilie Nastase were disqualified after an incident-packed match which ended with the American storming off the court.

Ashe, one of the coolest tempered players on the pro circuit, headed for the dressing rooms halfway through the final set when Nastase, who had already been warned by the Swedish umpire for his behavior, began arguing with the crowd after a disputed point.

West German referee Horst Klosterkemper came on court to admonish the Romanian, but when Nastase continued to delay the game, Ashe picked up his rackets and stalked off.

Klosterkemper then talked with both players, who could be heard shouting at each other in the dressing rooms, for an hour before announcing his decision to disqualify both men — the first time such a ruling has been made in a major tournament.

Ashe had clawed his way back into the match after a disastrous start and was leading 1-6, 7-5, 4-1, with Nastase trailing 15-40 on his own serve when the match boiled over. Nastase earlier had been warned by umpire Goeran Sandstroem for smashing a ball at a linesman and throwing his racket across the court.

The two players were still exchanging words at the news conference where the referee's decision was announced.

"I've played this guy a million times. I won't take that crap from him any more," said Ashe.

"Every time it is my fault," said Nastase who earlier this year was disqualified for unsportsmanlike behavior in the Canadian Open in Toronto and at the Bournemouth Hard-court championships two weeks before Wimbledon.

"Remember this. It was I who stayed on court. Ashe was the one who walked out," said Nastase.

Klosterkemper said he was about to disqualify Nastase for his antics when Ashe walked off. "It is my decision to disqualify them both. Nobody wins and nobody loses and the match will not be replayed," he said.

The disputed point acting as a catalyst to a match which was never far from the boil came when Nastase served before Ashe was ready. Ashe caught the ball and the umpire ruled a let and told Nastase to serve two more.

The Romanian refused and began arguing first with the umpire, then with Ashe and finally with the crowd.

Ashe said he gave the umpire two minutes to disqualify Nastase before he walked off. "The umpire did not do what he should have done. I will protest in the strongest possible way to the committee," Ashe said.

In earlier less turbulent matches, defending champion Guillermo Vilas of Argentina defeated Harold Solomon of Silver Springs, Md., 6-3, 6-4. Local Bjorn Borg demolished Mexico's Raul Ramirez 6-3, 6-3 and Manuel Orantes of Spain downed Italy's Adriano Panatta 6-4, 7-6.

Kareem, Allen Know the Feeling

By United Press International
Lucious Allen and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar know the feeling of winning at home in Los Angeles. Allen and Abdul-Jabbar, in their collegiate days under John Wooden at UCLA, hardly ever experienced the taste of defeat at the Bruins' cozy home, Pauley Pavilion. Now, as pros with the Los Angeles Lakers, their finding it much the same.

Thanks to Allen's eight points in the last four minutes Sunday, the Lakers downed the Portland Trail Blazers 116-109 for their 11th consecutive home victory. Portland had trailed by 16 points at halftime but rallied back when Abdul-Jabbar fouled out.

Allen, scoreless in the third period, contributed two rebounds and one steal in the final four minutes in addition to his eight points and finished with 20 points and five assists. Abdul-Jabbar, meanwhile, wound up with 22 points and 12 rebounds.

Elsewhere in the National Basketball Association, Kansas City topped the New York Knicks 110-98 and Philadelphia sacked New Orleans 113-96.

76ers 113, Jazz 96
Reserve forward Steve Mix scored 12 points in the second quarter to spark Philadelphia over the slumping Jazz. Doug Collins led the 76ers with 20 points, while New Orleans, still playing without Pete Maravich, was led by Louie Nelson's 27 points.

Kings 110, Knicks 98
Nate Archibald and Jimmy Walker combined for 46 points to ignite Kansas City over the Knicks. The Kings put together a 15-4 spurge at the start of the fourth quarter to break the game open. The Knicks have now lost five of their last six games.

Nets 113, Colonels 84
Julius Erving provided the offense for the Nets with 28 points while centers Swen Nater and Kim Hughes teamed for 26 rebounds to put away Kentucky. In the fourth quarter, Hughes scored 13 of his 15 points and collected 10 of his 12 rebounds. Brian Taylor added 19 and John Williamson 18 for the Nets.

Spurs 127, Spirits 115
James Silas scored 15 third period points to ignite the Spurs past St. Louis. Silas finished with 30 points as the Spurs outscored St. Louis 26-10 during one span of the third quarter to ice the game. Billy Paultz and George Gervin had 29 points each for San Antonio.

Rangers, Bruins Both Gloating

It was, perhaps, the first night both the New York Rangers and Boston Bruins could gloat together over the blockbuster five-man player deal they consummated a few weeks ago.

The Bruins, despite the absence of Bobby Orr, extended their unbeaten streak to 11 games by downing the Pittsburgh Penguins 4-2 Sunday night. No small part of that victory, however, was the contribution of ex-Rangers Jean Ratelle and Brad Park.

The Rangers, meanwhile, got back on the winning track by slamming their friendly cousins, the St. Louis Blues, 5-2. Biggest contributor to the Ranger victory was none other than Phil Esposito, the key figure (as far as they were concerned) in the deal that sent Park and Ratelle to Boston.

Esposito scored two goals and opened the Ranger scoring with a power play marker.

"My ankle is getting stronger," said Esposito, who almost immediately after coming to New York went out with the painful injury — thus nullifying any initial Ranger gloating. "I'll still have to live with it for a month or so, but I'm getting my timing back."

And if Esposito's timing continues to improve, the Rangers may soon be able to enjoy the prosperity the Bruins have had since the trade — on a regular basis.

With Orr sidelined with more knee surgery, the Bruins still have managed to continue their unbeaten streak over the last two games and Sunday it was a rebound of Ratelle's shot that Wayne Cashman converted for the go-ahead goal against the Penguins, while Park later rammed home an empty-net insurance marker with 12 seconds to go.

Elsewhere in the NHL, Montreal edged the New York Islanders 3-2, Philadelphia vanquished Vancouver 5-3, Kansas City and Chicago deadlocked at 1-1 and Atlanta bested California 4-1.

Over in the World Hockey Association, Ron Ward scored a league record-tying five goals to lead Cleveland over the Toronto Toros 10-9, Edmonton edged Calgary 4-2, Quebec shaded Phoenix 2-1, Denver topped Indianapolis 4-2, Houston drubbed San Diego 8-4 and Winnipeg triumphed over Minnesota 5-3.

Flyers 5, Canucks 3
Don Saleski scored a late third period goal to break a 3-3 tie and climax a come-from-behind Philadelphia win over Vancouver. Vancouver surged out to a 2-0 lead, but the Flyers came back to go ahead with three second period goals from Andre Dupont, Rick MacLeish and Mel Bridgeman.

Canadiens 3, Islanders 2
Steve Shutt scored two goals, including the game-winner as Montreal increased its first place lead to 11 points over idle Los Angeles in the Norris Division. Shutt's winning goal came at 14:59 of the final period after Islander goalie Glenn Resch initially made the stop but failed to hold on.

Black Hawks 1, Scouts 1
Wilf Paiement scored with 10:20 to go to earn Kansas City its tie with Chicago. The deadlocked nonetheless enabled the Black Hawks to extend their unbeaten streak to 14 games. Grant Mulvey scored the Chicago goal in the first period.

Flames 4, Seals 1
Tom Lysiak scored two goals to spark a second period outburst that propelled Atlanta over California. Lysiak's goals, his ninth and tenth of the year, highlighted a three goal outburst by the Flames which broke a 1-1 tie.

WHA
After Ward scored his five goals, which helped wipe out an 8-2 Toronto lead, John A. Stewart scored the gamewinner for Cleveland which took a record 63 shots in the 109 shot-fest with the Toros. "I'm excited because we were losing 8-2 and it made us turn it around and win," Ward said. "But I just want to get 30 goals this year. Anybody can score five if he's lucky."

Two Spots Open in Cotton and Liberty Bowls

By United Press International

Arizona State locked up a berth in the Fiesta Bowl for the fourth time in five years Saturday night, leaving only two spots undecided for the post-season major college football bowl parade.

The two remaining slots are in the Cotton and Liberty Bowls and both will be determined next Saturday when second-ranked Texas A&M meets 17th-ranked Arkansas for the Southwest Conference championship. The winner will go to the Cotton Bowl to meet Georgia with the loser facing Southern California in the Liberty Bowl.

Arizona State, which finished its season with a perfect 11-0 record, defeated Arizona 24-21 in their Western Athletic Conference showdown and will face Big Eight runnerup Nebraska (11-0) in the Dec. 26 Fiesta Bowl at Tempe, Ariz. Quarterback Dennis Sproul sparked the eighth-ranked Sun Devils' triumph by tossing two touchdown passes to John Jefferson and running for a third. Jefferson's TD receptions were for eight and seven yards, the first a nearly impossible diving catch with 30 seconds left in the first half which brought Arizona State within 14-10 after Arizona had turned two Sun Devil fumbles into touchdowns.

Jefferson's second catch put the Sun Devils ahead 17-14 less than four minutes into the second half, but it was Sproul's one-yard sneak in the opening minutes of the fourth quarter that put the Sun Devils ahead to stay.

Texas A&M, which trimmed Texas 20-10 on Friday to remain unbeaten in 10 games, will be seeking its first Cotton Bowl appearance since 1967 and Coach Emory Ballard doesn't feel his team will have any problem maintaining an emotional peak for the Razorbacks.

"When our guys start looking at the films of Arkansas, it won't take them long to get in the right frame of mind," says Ballard. "Our team doesn't have any illusions about Arkansas."

Aggies' defensive back Pat Thomas supports his coach's thinking.

"The very second that gun went off (concluding the Texas contest), Arkansas became more important than Texas," he said. "The Texas win is sweet, but it will be even sweeter to beat Arkansas."

Arkansas (8-2), which has not been to the Cotton Bowl since 1966, will undoubtedly be the underdog but Coach Frank Broyles isn't especially awed by the Aggies.

"They are tough," said Broyles. "There is no doubt of that. But we think we are tough, too."

"We're excited about this opportunity. This is what everybody strives for. We don't have to win two, three or four games to achieve our goal. It's down to just this one."

In other major games Saturday, fourth-ranked Alabama spoiled the finale of retiring Auburn Coach Shug Jordan by blanking the Tigers 28-0; 13th-ranked Florida nipped Miami (Fla.) 15-11; Hawaii upset 16th-ranked San Jose State 30-20; Navy crushed Army for the third straight year, 30-6; Rutgers upset Syracuse 21-10 and Houston upended 18th-ranked Tulsa 42-30.

Quarterback Richard Todd ran for two touchdowns and passed for two more as Sugar Bowl-bound Alabama won its fifth consecutive Southeastern Conference championship. The Crimson Tide thoroughly humiliated the Tigers, outgaining them 430-144 in total offense.

"I don't think I'll ever get over this season," said Jordan, whose team finished a disappointing 3-6-2 after being picked in the preseason ratings to finish among the top 10. "It'll be with me as long as I live. I'd like to rectify it, but of course that's impossible."

Jordan, 65, retired with a record of 175-83-7, more wins than all but three active coaches in the country.

Florida, which will meet Maryland in the Gator Bowl, needed a 63-yard punt return with 3:48 remaining to defeat Miami. The Gators then survived a final scare in the last two minutes as Miami drove to the Florida 16 before Bobby Ball intercepted a pass in the end zone to preserve the triumph.

Hawaii overcame eight first half fumbles to upset San Jose State, placekicker Larry Muczynski kicked three field goals and Bob Jackson scored two TDs to pace Navy over Army, All-East running back Curt Edwards rushed for 149 yards in helping Rutgers down Syracuse and quarterback David Humann passed for three TDs in leading Houston to victory over Tulsa.

Elsewhere, Boston College beat Holy Cross 24-10, North Texas State edged West Texas State 16-15, Baylor trimmed Rice 25-7, Vanderbilt defeated Tennessee 17-14 and Southern Mississippi routed Brigham Young 42-14.

Smith Blasts 690 Series

KINGSTON

Bob (T) Smith continued his red hot shooting in the International League and for the second time this season grabbed hold of three places on the Top Ten List for area bowlers.

The lanky southpaw racked up a 690 set in the latest International meeting, and that was the second time he's hit that figure this year. Smith opened with a 221 and decked a 259 in the second game to add a little more substance to his 212 average.

Smith still holds the No. 1 triple, a 730, and his two 690's tie him with Lou Pori for possession of eighth place. Earlier in the year Smith posted a 682.

Veteran Bob Shlightner had a 267 solo to top the International in the singles department, and he tallied 649 for runnerup honors in the triples department. Ernie Cozza rolled a 637, Ed Pelham fired a 630, and Chris Schick, with the help of a 243 game, slammed 627.

Other big shooters were Pudgy Dunn at 629, Steve Ferraro at 610, Bob Sinnott at 607 and Charles Manfro Sr. at 604.

Indiana's Pressure Defense Ruined UCLA

By UPI

"Pressure" is the word Gene Bartow has heard most often since replacing John Wooden as UCLA's coach and pressure proved the Bruins' demise Saturday night. It wasn't the pressure of John Wooden's ghost that ruined Bartow's UCLA debut, but Indiana's pressure defense.

UCLA guards Andre McCarter and Jim Spillane proved unable to cope with the top-ranked Hoosiers' tenacious defense in St. Louis and the result was a surprisingly lopsided 84-64 Indiana victory.

"If a team doesn't get the pressure relieved efficiently and smoothly against Indiana, they're in serious trouble," Bartow said. "Indiana's pressure defense has always gotten many teams in trouble. Indiana proved they sure deserve the No. 1 rating they have."

The UCLA guards certainly were never able to solve Indiana's pressure defense and the Bruins were guilty of 21 turnovers.

All-America forward Scott May scored 33 points as the Hoosiers established themselves as the top-heavy favorite to win the NCAA championship in Philadelphia at the end of the season.

However, Bartow was determined the Bruins would be there for a rematch with the Hoosiers. "Come March, we'll be there," Bartow said. "Don't worry, we'll be better."

"I've never had a team execute better," Indiana coach Bobby Knight said.

Forward Richard Washington led UCLA with 28 points.

In other games involving top-ranked teams Saturday:

Fourth-ranked North Carolina, with guard Phil Ford setting a school record of 14 assists and scoring 15 points, took a 115-75 victory over Howard University.

Center Mitch Kupchak poured in 24 points for the Tar Heels and had 14 rebounds and guard Tommy LaGarde had 20 points and nine rebounds. Howard guard Ellingworth Hart led all scorers with 30 points.

All-America John Lucas and Steve Sheppard combined for 52 points to lead fifth-ranked Maryland to a record-tying 127-84 rout over East Carolina. Sheppard, a junior forward, finished with 28 points and Lucas had 24 as the Terps tied a school record for most points in a game.

Eighth-ranked Tennessee's run-and-shoot attack, led by Ernie Grunfeld, blitzed Biscayne College 81-63. Grunfeld had 28 points to lead all scorers. Mike Jackson had 23 and Bernard King, who fouled out with 2:40 to go, had 16.

Bob Miller and Steve Collier combined for 42 points as the 10th-ranked Cincinnati Bearcats opened their season with an easy 98-65 win over Cleveland State. The 6-foot-10 Miller connected for 22 points on 11 of 13 attempts from the field, while Collier had 20 points and Brian Williams 19.

All-American Adrian Dantley, with 25 points, led 11th-ranked Notre Dame to a 90-61 victory over Kent State.

Junior guard Phillip Bond drove home three layups in the final seconds to spark 12th-ranked Louisville to a 79-74 win over Memphis State. No. 13 San Francisco won its second game of the season with a 90-70 victory over UC-Davis. No. 17 Washington defeated Seattle, 72-66, behind Lars Hansern's 20 points and Joe Hassett scored 18 points to lead No. 19 Providence to a 71-51 win over Brown.

Words Don't Help

Indiana Hoosiers' coach Bob Knight consoles Marques Johnson of UCLA after Indiana whipped the Bruins in St. Louis Saturday night, but it will take more than words to erase the look of pain from the face of UCLA coach Gene Bartow. (UPI)

Bartow Would Like Rematch

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Gene Bartow, loser in his debut at the helm of the defending champion UCLA Bruins, says he would like to get better acquainted with his new team and would like a rematch with top-ranked Indiana.

He has plenty of time for both.

The Bruins were totally outclassed by Indiana, 84-64, in the season-opener Saturday night. Bobby Knight, the strident commander of the Hoosiers who were undefeated last year until upset in post-season play, had his welltuned squad swarming all over the Bruins, and UCLA just couldn't shake loose.

Bartow's job as successor to John Wooden, the Wizard of Westwood who won 10 national championships in the last 12 years, is tough enough without a decisive loss on national television.

But the man they call "Clean Gene" accepted the Bruins' first loss in a season-opener in 11 years with grace.

Bartow said he's still looking at his new players and added, "I know that the Indiana game to open with isn't a good situation to look at players." He said he should have a better idea of what the Bruins can do by the time the Pacific 8 play begins in January.

He found out quickly what Indiana can do and do well. Scott May hit 15 of 24 from the floor to notch a game-high 33 points, and the Hoosier defense choked off any inside attack the Bruins tried to muster. Forced into costly errors and missing bad-percentage outside shots, UCLA was down by eight at halftime, 36-28, and never came close again.

Discussing what he called Indiana's "pressure defense," Bartow said his guards just didn't shoot well enough from the outside to open things up.

"If a team doesn't get the pressure relieved efficiently and smoothly against Indiana, they're in serious trouble," he said.

Bartow was generous in his praise of May and his teammates. He said big center Kent Benson has "come on stronger and stronger" and predicted four of the Hoosier starters could easily be first-round draft picks by the pros.

Knight returned the compliment for UCLA's Richard Washington, who came on strong in the second half to lead the Bruins with 28 points.

The Indiana coach, who kept up his usual running commentary as his team piled up a lead as large as 26 points, said both teams felt the big buildup for the game and he didn't have to give his squad any pep talks. "I'm not much of a Rockne," he told reporters after the game.

Knight praised Quinn Buckner, who provided 14 points and his usual leadership on the floor and said his team's offense is designed for everyone. "Our offense takes everybody everywhere," he said. "It's geared to get everybody at different spots on the floor."

The last showdown between the two teams at the St. Louis Arena saw UCLA defeat the Hoosiers in 1973 on its way to the national crown. Bartow hopes the next time will come in March at the NCAA tournament in Philadelphia and he also hopes the outcome will be a little different.

Ithaca Earns Bid in Stagg

By United Press International

For the second straight season, Ithaca College has earned a berth in the Amos Alonzo Stagg Bowl, the championship contest for NCAA Division III colleges.

The Bombers defeated Widener College Saturday, 23-14, in a semi-final Division III game.

In other games involving New York State elevens, Rutgers defeated Syracuse 21-10 and Navy crushed Army 30-6.

Ithaca held off the Pioneers' rushing game, which ranked first among Division III schools this year with 338 yards per game, and unleashed its own ground attack.

Ithaca meets Wittenberg College, which defeated Millsaps College 55-22, in the Stagg Bowl in Phenix City, Ala., this Saturday.

Last year, the Bombers lost to Central of Iowa, 10-8, in the Stagg Bowl.

Quarterback Jerry Boyes, who rushed for 153 yards and one touchdown, and running back Dave Pitzer, who ran for 73 yards and two TDs, led the Ithaca offense.

The game was close, at 16-14, with two minutes left in the game, but Ithaca iced the win when Pitzer scored on a two-yard dash. Dave Piper's extra point kick put the game out of reach.

The Bombers rushed for 316 yards, while their defense held the Pioneers to less than half that amount.

Despite Syracuse's defeat, the Orangemen finished the year with their first winning season since 1967 with a 6-5 record. The Scarlet Knights' sixth-ranked defense held the Orangemen to only 117 yards offense.

However, Rutgers still needed a pair of fourth quarter touchdowns to notch the victory.

Army's loss to its traditional rival was its third straight defeat by Navy. The Midshipmen's nationally ranked defense held the Cadets scoreless until midway through the final quarter.

Navy held Army scoreless in the last two meetings.

A Very Determined Man

Richard De Ford, 30, of Escondido, Calif., blew his hands off while experimenting with a homemade bomb when he was 13-years-old. He graduated recently from truck driving school and last week also became the first bilateral amputee in California to pass the road test that qualifies him for a trucker's license, scoring 97 out of a possible 100 points. He says of his handicap, "I accept it and make the best of it." Now, he's looking for a job, but hopes to eventually buy his own rig. (UPI)

Don Antonio Develops New Grape

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Antonio Perelli-Minetti, 95, the dean of California winemakers, has developed a grape that will add a new dimension to enology.

The patented varietal grape is known as Perelli 101. It is, being used to produce a full-bodied red wine that Don Antonio calls "equal or better than the Napa Valley or Sonoma County wines I knew so well in my earlier years."

Don Antonio is the patriarch of a family that operates the 1,200-acre California Wine Association vineyard near Delano in the state's central valley. The winery crushes more than 100,000 tons of grapes a year. Three hundred and forty are planted with Perelli 101.

The experimental wines made from the grape have a strong raspberry flavor. Others call the taste rather like fresh ginger. Connoisseurs say it is a gutsy wine with high tannin and fine balance.

Don Antonio has not yet introduced Perelli 101 for general consumption. He uses it in blending instead. He feels that the 101 grapes crushed in the past couple of years need further fermentation.

Don Antonio developed the variety after a long, careful program based on the growth of sports on plants and trees.

The red apple is a sport that first appeared on a tree bearing yellow apples. It netted the owner $5,000. He sold it to a seedsman, who placed an iron case around it.

From that little sport came the Red Delicious apple now produced commercially by many nations.

Don Antonio said sports occur in vines, also, whether by different berries on a given bunch or by different bunches. They are so well marked and so different from their fellows that anyone interested would easily notice.

He gathered his sports by walking through vineyard rows looking for different berries.

After many years of trial and many different berries, Perelli 101 came into being.

Don Antonio said 101 is a prolific bearer and at harvest time "a beautiful sight ... with its long, slate-blue berry clusters cascading downward from supporting trellises."

"We believe there is at present no other wine like Perelli 101. Of course, whether the public will accept 101 is something we will have to wait to see."

Don Antonio is the oldest pre-Prohibition vintner still active in California's wine business.

Born in 1880 in Barletta, Italy, he came to California in 1902. He had learned the art of winemaking in his homeland.

Proposes Gas Supply Stretcher

NEW YORK (UPI) — A new global industry to produce more than 150 million gallons daily of low grade alcohols from waste products for use in blending motor fuels is envisioned by a Long Island chemist.

The goal of Dr. Alfred Globus of Hauppauge, is breathtaking — to make the world's supplies of gasoline go twice as far as they do now. It is a long-range plan but he believes a substantial production could be achieved within five years to serve motorists in the countries where gasoline prices are highest.

Globus described his project in September before the National Petroleum Refiners Association in Houston. He said he has been running standard automobiles for months on mixtures containing just under 50 per cent gasoline, 15 per cent water and the rest low grade alcohols made from sugar-cane waste (bagasse), cornstalks or wastepaper recycling liquors, plus a catalyst or complexing agent he has patented under the name Hydrelate.

These low-grade alcohols include ethanol, T-butanol and others containing fuel oil and water. They also could be obtained from cotton or soybean stalks, garbage, and other cellulose sources including fast-growing weed plants such as mandioc, which could be grown on otherwise worthless ground, particularly in tropical or subtropical countries such as Brazil, Mexico, Hawaii, the Philippines, Thailand and many other places.

A spokesman for the National Petroleum Refiners Association in Washington told United Press International Globus's talk aroused no skepticism on technological grounds but that economically his proposal was staggering. "After all," the spokesman said, "there is nothing radically new in Globus's technology."

Globus agreed with that. His contributions are the precise formulation he calls Hydrofuel, the proprietary catalyst and months of experimentation.

Water injection has been used in gasoline fuels with success for racing cars and aircraft for years. So have gasoline-alcohol mixtures. Although the German Wehrmacht and Luftwaffe depended largely on synthetic gasoline made from coal in World War II, they also used alcohol fuel additives made from farm waste and cheap wines.

Although fuel conservation rather than cutting costs is Globus's primary aim, his Hydrofuel costs him slightly less per mile than straight gasoline in the New York area. In countries where gasoline is very expensive the cost per mile would be much less. Hydrofuel anywhere would cost less per gallon than straight gasoline but the mileage per gallon also would be less. The higher the price of gasoline goes in the United States, the more incentive the American motorist would have to use the alcohol-water-gasoline mixture.

The mixture does not require any adjustment to the standard carburetor. You can drive on Hydrofuel until your tank runs low, then fill up with straight gasoline if need be; unleaded gas is a little more compatible than leaded gasoline with the alcohols.

The mixture causes no acceleration, top speed or hill climbing problems and doesn't interfere with engine life, Globus said.

Ecologically, the mixture produces fewer hydrocarbon exhaust emissions than straight gasoline but the reduction in nitrogen oxide emissions as compared with straight gasoline is not conspicuous, so similar exhaust purification devices must be used.

Sawyer smiles with you over the Tax-Deferred IRA Plan

It's nice to know someone will take care of your future. At Sawyer Savings Bank we're happy to be the ones to care. If you're not covered by a pension plan where you work, Sawyer Savings can help you prepare for the future with an Individual Retirement Account (IRA).

This plan enables you to put aside up to 15% of your annual income, or $1500, whichever is less, and delay paying taxes on this money until you actually retire.

Sawyer Savings Bank will provide you with a choice of plans for making these retirement dollars grow. You may decide on a Regular or Day-of-Deposit to Day-of-Withdrawal Account, or on one of several Savings Certificate Accounts. No matter which type savings account you select, you'll be sure of earning the highest interest allowed by law.

For those who are self-employed, we offer the "Keogh" special retirement plan that is also tax-deductible year after year right up to retirement.

For all the facts you need on planning for your future, stop and see the people at Sawyer Savings Bank . . . and smile.

Communists Agree To Participate

HELSINKI, Finland (UPI) — Finland had a new coalition government today — the first since 1970 in which the nation's second largest party, the Communist Party, agreed to participate.

President Urho K. Kekkonen Sunday appointed a five-party government of national emergency and picked Martti Miettunen, a retired Center party politician who was premier in 1961-1962, to head the government.

The Communists received four of the 18 cabinet posts, including the Ministry of Manpower.

Kekkonen made an unprecedented appeal Nov. 27 to the five parties to form a government and gave them until today to comply.

The coalition of Social Democrats, Communists, Center party, Swedish party and liberals holds 152 seats in the 200-member parliament.

Premier Miettunen, 68, told reporters: "The government's most important and urgent task is to secure employment."

The Communists also have labeled unemployment as the most important problem in Finland and Kekkonen, in effect, directly challenged them to solve the problem from within the government instead of through parliamentary opposition.

The already split Communist party argued fiercely before agreeing to join the government.

Aarne Saarinen, leader of the moderate Communist faction, said, "We have taken the responsibility, we have had some very hot feelings. This is a test period and we shall soon see how the experiment works."

The government lists 63,200 unemployed or 2.8 per cent of the work force among the 4.7 million Finns. The figure is considered very high by Finnish standards and is expected to rise to three per cent.

The new government also faces a 1975 trade deficit of $2.1 billion and an annual inflation rate of 17 per cent.

Finland's last government resigned in June saying it could not handle the country's economic crisis.

Make Holiday Ornaments

NEW YORK

"Looking for some unusual ornaments for the holiday season?" asks Kathleen Strawhacker, consumer information specialist for Johnson Wax.

"There are items around the house that are made to order." One example, she points out, is the cap on a bottle of a fabric softener such as Rain Barrel. "They're already bell-shaped and when they've been painted, dusted with glitter and had a hole tapped in the top with a nail, they can be hung with wire for a festive look", she says. "Take a look around your house for potential ornaments among those things you might otherwise throw away."

Results of Storm

Debbie Kushing tries to find some salvagable items in the remains of her motor home which was destroyed by a tornado which struck the community of Pawnee, Ill., on Sunday. Three other trailers were damaged heavily from the winter storm which brought strong gusty winds to much of central Illinois. (UPI)

'Fiscal Chaos' In Army

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Army may have been subsidizing at its own expense U.S. arms sales abroad, its auditors have discovered. Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., called the findings an example of "rampant mismanagement and financial chaos" in the Defense Department.

"Army procurement appropriations were over-obligated and foreign sales may have been subsidized at the expense of the Army's direct funds," said a report by the Army's audit agency.

Aspin, who obtained a copy of the report, said it is against the law to "over-obligate" money and to subsidize sales. He called the audit "the most devastating case I have ever seen of rampant mismanagement and financial chaos within the Pentagon."

Assistant Army Secretary Hadlai A. Hull told UPI the problems turned up in the audit are now being resolved, partly by converting from hand entries to computers at the International Logistics Command in New Cumberland, Md.

The audit found: — The Army made payments to contractors for foreign sales before receiving the money from the foreign purchasers — an apparent violation of the pay-as-you-go requirement of the Foreign Military Sales Act. Hull said there always was more than enough in the foreign sales trust fund to cover the Army payouts.

— For actual sale items, the audit said, "the Army did not have a clear pricing policy. We identified actual over- and underpricing of $101 million: $56 million in overcharges and $45 million in undercharges."

— For added costs such as transportation, test ammunition and lubricants, it said, "In some cases the costs were computed wrong or added twice. Over and underbilling could be as much as $50 million: $26 million in overcharges and $24 million in undercharges."

— "Indications are that the Army is not recovering all of its administrative costs on (foreign military sales) cases," the audit said, since it "reported spending $31 million to manage the foreign sales program in 1974 but collected only $13 million based on deliveries."

A Defense Department spokesman said a study is under way to see if the 2 per cent surcharge for administrative costs was too small.

Death Toll Below Predicted Figure

By UPI

The final death count from the Thanksgiving holiday traffic toll remained well below preholiday projections despite blustery weather that complicated driving.

A wayward eagle was responsible for one of the worst accidents of the 102-hour weekend.

A pickup truck rambling down a Texas highway with two young women and a one-year-old girl inside collided with an eagle flying across the truck's path. All three occupants were thrown from the truck and the two women died.

Also among the dead were three members of a Stanford, Mich., family, killed Saturday when their car went out of control two miles west of Winn, Mich., careened into the oncoming lane and was struck broadside by another car.

Powerful storms swept the midlands and portions of the West on the opening day of the holiday period, snarling traffic and stranding motorists. More inclement weather persisted Sunday as holiday travelers headed home.

Snow swirled over portions of the West and Northwest. Rain, sometimes interspersed with snow, stretched over portions of New York and wind storms and heavy snows assailed portions of the nation's midsection.

A Thanksgiving storm that swept over Utah was responsible for five deaths — four of them mishaps on snow-slicked roadways.

The fifth was a teen-age cross country skier caught in the Wasatch Mountains by heavy snows Friday and found dead beneath the crust Sunday afternoon.

The National Safety Council had predicted between 450 and 550 persons would die in the four-day period between 6 p.m. last Wednesday and midnight Sunday. But despite the storms, the death toll remained well below the projected proportions.

A United Press International count as of 2 a.m. EST Monday showed 308 persons had died on highways since the start of the holiday period. A breakdown of accidental deaths:

Traffic	349
Fire	30
Planes	14
Other	33
Total	436

California reported 35 traffic fatalities, North Carolina 22, Georgia 19, New York 18, Texas and Florida 17 each and Ohio and Pennsylvania 15 each.

New Jersey reported eight traffic deaths. State police said the relatively smaller number of fatalities this year apparently resulted from heavy traffic, which forced motorists to slow down.

The real property affected by this action is located at 5081 Kings Highway, in the Town of Ulster, Ulster County, New York, being premises described in a deed from Harold R. Waterman, Sr. to Donald Charles Waterman and Carol Ann Waterman, dated March 1, 1973, and recorded in the Ulster County Clerk's Office at Liber 1296 of Deeds at Page 284, and as more particularly described therein.

The People of the State of New York, By the Grace of God, Free and Independent, do hereby order and direct that the undersigned, Attorney General of the State of New York, and All distributees, if any (all of whom and all of whose names, addresses and post office addresses are unknown to petitioners), of FRIEND SMITH, late of 31 East Main Street, Stony Point, Rockland County, New York, including any brother or sisters of CHARLES SMITH or of CARIE OSTERHOUDT SMITH (the parents of said FRIEND SMITH) and any descendants of said CHARLES SMITH or of said CARIE OSTERHOUDT SMITH or of any brothers or sisters of said CHARLES SMITH or of said CARIE OSTERHOUDT SMITH, if any such persons are living; and, as to any of such persons who may have died on or after August 7, 1975, the executor, administrators, devisees, legatees, assignees, creditors or distributees; and all other persons who may be interested in this proceeding.

Send Greeting: Whereas, Lillian Liburn Peters, who is domiciled at 3 Gardner Road, North Scituate, Massachusetts 02060, and DONALD L. LILBURN, CLARK, who is domiciled at 44 Crescent Hill Road, Pittsford, New York 14534 have lately applied to the Surrogate's court of the County of Rockland, to execute an instrument in writing, dated May 27, 1958, relating to both real and personal property, duly provided as the last will and testament of FRIEND SMITH, deceased, who was at the time of his death domiciled at 31 East Main Street, Stony Point, in said County of Rockland.

Therefore, you and each of you are hereby cited to show cause before the Surrogate's Court of our said County of Rockland, at the Surrogate's office in the Rockland County Court House, New City, New York, on the 30th day of December, 1975, at 9:30 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, why the said instrument should not be admitted to probate as a will of real and personal property.

In Testimony Whereof, we have caused the seal of the SURROGATE'S Court of our said County of Rockland, to be hereunto affixed. Witness: Hon. John F. Skahan, Surrogate of our said County of Rockland, his office in New City, New York, the 24th day of November, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and seventy-five.

For Tuesday, Dec. 2, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You can easily win co-operation today if your approach is frank and open. Lay your cards on the table.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Keep your material goals in mind today. They'll inspire you to put forth the effort for success in your endeavors.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

You'll be meeting someone socially whom you'll have an instant affinity for. An old friend will make the introductions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This is a good time to begin a creative project, especially if it's something to do with beautifying your surroundings.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The way you'll handle yourself today will make a lasting impression upon those you meet for the first time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today, don't leave an important matter half-finished. It's to your advantage to clean it up now, if at all possible.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Weigh your alternatives carefully today before making an important decision. You have more advantages than you may realize.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your material prospects are extremely bright today. Concentrate on situations that can offer you personal gain.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) What you hope for is not out of reach today if you gamble on your ingenuity and resourcefulness, rather than someone else's.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your best returns today come by letting others think your ideas are their own. Results, not credits, are what to look for.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't be a loner today — get out. Mix with friends. If you don't have anything on the agenda, stir something up.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Spend as much time as possible today on a goal of paramount importance. Good things will happen if you'll work at it.

ANSWERS: (Q.) What gave you the idea to write and discuss problems with people? Where do you get all your answers? Are they personal answers, or do you get them from books? — Female Reader, Age 17, in Pennsylvania

(A.) I was educated as a counselor. Many who do this work counsel only privately, one person or a couple at a time. But I like to meet people and talk with them, and counseling in lectures and by mail came naturally to me. At first I wrote a column for only one newspaper, but it has grown to be nationwide. It has turned out to be deeply rewarding.

My education in the field has continued. This year I received a doctor of philosophy degree. All the answers I give are my own. But all are based on long experience and study of books and of people.

LIFELONG: (Q.) I am in love with Randy. He is a neighbor and is three years older than I am. Please don't tell me to drop him because I can't.

I have known and liked him all my life. I tried to tell him once how much I loved him but made a fool of myself. How can I get him to see me as a girl friend instead of just a kid in the neighborhood? — 15 in Florida

(A.) Time is on your side. As you grow older and more attractive, Randy can hardly help but notice you. Encourage this by being friendly with him, and by arranging as well as you can to be places where he is. But no more confessions of love to him. Let him take any steps that are taken.

Pancake House Safe Stolen

By Matt Spireng

TOWN OF ULSTER
Burglars made off with a safe reportedly containing some $1,000 in cash and checks from the International House of Pancakes in the Town of Ulster.

According to Ulster County Sheriff's deputies, the thief or thieves had to smash concrete around the safe, which was embedded in the floor, in order to remove it.

The burglary was discovered at about 6:40 a.m. today by a garbage collector, authorities said. The rear door of the building had been pried open, apparently sometime early today, detectives said.

Investigation of the burglary is continuing.

USDA Open House

KINGSTON
The three agencies of the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) that provide services in Ulster County will conduct an open house at their new office facilities in the North Front Street Dental Building on Friday, Dec. 12 at 1 p.m.

Congressman Hamilton Fish Jr. (R-25) and Peter J. Savago, chairman of the Ulster County Legislature, have been invited to attend the open house and participate in the formal ceremonies.

The three departments now located at the new dental building are the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service, Farmers Home Administration and the Soil Conservation Service. Previously, the departments were located at separate sites in uptown Kingston.

USDA officials say that the consolidation of office space will provide greater conveniences for the public and result in a more efficient operation of the three related government services.

The new USDA offices are located at the corner of North Front Street and Washington Avenue.

Koenig Names 'Certiorari Panel'

KINGSTON
Mayor Francis R. Koenig — apparently prompted by a recent court decision which led to a $585,000 tax rebate for Hudson Cement — has announced the appointment of a five-member "bi-partisan" committee to investigate "the problem of certiorari proceedings" and to come up with recommendations to prevent further tax assessment setbacks.

The Hudson Cement case was the latest, and most prominent, in a series of certiorari proceedings brought against the city in recent years by taxpayers who felt they were being over-assessed. In many of those instances, the tax assessments were reduced, creating, according to Mayor Koenig, "additional tax burdens on the other property owners in the city."

"It is most apparent to me," added the Mayor, "that immediate action must be taken to once and for all put an end to this most serious problem."

Vincent Bradley of 115 Green Street, an attorney, was appointed chairman of the committee. The other members are Martin Aaron of Fowler and Keith, Inc.; Albert Teetsel of 189 Fairview Ave.

nue, a banker; Mrs. Jewells Cioni of 80 West Chestnut Street and George Glaser of 140 First Avenue.

The committee has until Dec. 31 to conduct its investigation and issue its recommendations. The Mayor has suggested that the committee meet with the city's Corporation Counsel and Assessor, as well as with the city's Board of Assessment Review, to obtain necessary information and suggestions.

Noting that certiorari proceedings "have plagued the city of Kingston for a good number of years," the Mayor added that, "based upon the findings of this committee, it is hopeful that immediate action may be taken in the year 1976 to correct the problem to the benefit of the residents and taxpayers of the City of Kingston."

The Hudson Cement case involved a negotiated reduction in the firm's tax assessment which forces the city to pay almost $600,000 in back taxes to Strelene Realty (owners of Hudson Cement).

Specifically, the city owes Strelene $186,051.74 for 1973, $203,736.74 for 1974 and $193,358.91 for 1975 — a total of $583,147.40. Strelene's assessment was reduced from $4 million to $1,408,000 in 1973, $1,468,000 in 1974 and $1,528,000 in 1975.

In addition, a recent certiorari proceeding brought by Kingston Plaza resulted in a tax loss of $37,387.87 for the city after a court-ordered assessment reduction. The two cases represent $620,535.27 in tax rebates that the city will have to pay to the two corporations; $589,000 of that will be paid through the issuance of serial bonds.

Council to Act On Bid

KINGSTON
A resolution calling for the acceptance of the low bid for the purchase of three 23-passenger mini-buses by the City of Kingston has been added to the agenda for Tuesday's Kingston Common Council meeting.

The resolution calls for the acceptance of a bid of $19,798 per bus ($57,612 total) by Grumman Allied Industries of Garden City.

Bids for the buses were opened last week, with bids coming in considerably lower than expected by city officials, who have received commitments from state and federal agencies for a $94,000 grant for the purchase of the buses for the expansion of the city's mass transportation system. The city is required to pay five per cent of the cost of the project.

Other bids received were from DeMico Motors of Kingston ($20,684 per bus), and from Minibus Inc. of Downey, Calif. ($29,140 per bus).

The city's choice must be approved by the state.

The city is currently serviced by only one bus, and addition of the three mini-buses is expected to result in the opening of new routes.

The resolution also calls for the acceptance of the low bid for three transit coach fareboxes to be installed in the buses.

The low bid was received from Diamond Manufacturing Inc. of Kansas City, Mo., which submitted a unit price of $368.69 per farebox.

The council meets at 7:30 p.m. at City Hall.

Police Beat

Sunday night at Richie's Sunoco Station on Washington Avenue in the Town of Ulster is under investigation by sheriff's deputies.

Deputies said two young males, one armed with a handgun, entered the station at about 9:25 p.m., confronted an employee and fled on foot with some $88.

Roadblocks were set up, deputies said, but did not result in an arrest.

Authorities said one of the robbers was white, about 5-feet, 8, with blond hair. The other was said to be Mexican-American, about 5-feet, 8, with black hair and weighing about 150 pounds.

Arson Probe

A burglary-arson investigation is underway by Saugerties Town Police following a fire Sunday afternoon in a garage at a Centerville residence.

Police said someone apparently broke into the garage at the William Shults residence on Pine Grove Road and attempted to steal a motorcycle. The motorcycle was not taken, but instead a fire was started in the garage. The motorcycle and about 50 per cent of the garage were destroyed by the blaze, police said.

Centerville firemen fought the blaze from about 3 p.m. to 4:45 p.m. There were no cars in the garage at the time of the blaze, police said.

Two Injured

Two New Jersey men were hospitalized Sunday following a one-car crash on the Thruway in the Town of Rosendale.

Thruway State Police said the car, operated by John Bucco of Colts Neck, N.J., ran off the highway into a ditch and overturned at about 4 p.m.

Hospitalized were two passengers in the auto, Matthew Harris, 20, of Woodcliff Lake, N.J., who was listed in fair condition today at Benedictine Hospital, and Steven O'Conner, 18, of Milburn, N.J., who was listed in poor condition today in the intensive care unit at the hospital.

Police ticketed Bucco for consumption of an alcoholic beverage in a vehicle.

Ransacked

At least five residences in the Garden Street-Shufeldt Street area of Kingston were reported ransacked by burglars over the weekend, according to Kingston detectives. Various amounts of money were missing from the houses, authorities said.

Rape Reported

Ulster County Sheriff's Department detectives are reportedly investigating a rape which occurred early Sunday. A Kingston woman was reportedly abducted from near her Emerick Street residence and was driven outside the city, where she was raped. Further details on the alleged rape were not available.

$60.7 Million County Budget Gets a Hearing

By Jon Powers

KINGSTON

Tonight is the night that the Ulster County Legislature finds out just what the public thinks about its tentative $60.7 million budget for 1976 . . . as if the legislators didn't already know.

The public hearing—probably the only one that will be held before the budget is ultimately approved later this month—will begin at 7 p.m. in the legislative chambers of the Ulster County Office Building. A large and vocal delegation is expected to question and challenge the lawmakers' spending priorities.

Although much of the projected $15 million budget increase (and $7.5 million increase in the amount to be raised by taxes) has been blamed on the soaring cost of welfare, the responsibility doesn't end there. In fact, social services appropriations actually represent less than 30 per cent of the overall projected budget increase.

There is no question that welfare appropriations will be higher in 1976—but so will revenues from state and federal aid. As a result, total appropriations for the four major segments of the welfare program will be about $6.1 million higher in 1976, but the cost to county taxpayers will increase "only" $1.9 million. State and federal aid will take care of the rest.

Even without welfare, there are some significant increases in sections of the proposed '76 county budget. The ones most likely to attract taxpayer attention and 11th hour reductions by the legislature are the contingency fund and an allowance for uncollected taxes.

The contingency fund now stands at $2 million, and was included in the tentative budget to protect the county against financial losses should New York City default on the taxes it pays annually on its extensive land holdings in Ulster County. But with President Ford's recent promise of $2.3 billion in federal loans for New York, the prospects of default have all but disappeared. The $2 million contingency fund in the Ulster County budget is as good as gone.

But an even larger increase is included in the allowance for uncollected taxes: $1.3 million in 1975, $3.7 million projected for 1976. That tentative $2.4 million increase, according to one county legislator, "is a lot of money to spend on the assumption that a lot of Ulster County residents are not going to pay their taxes next year."

If the $2 million contingency fund is eliminated, and if the allowance for unpaid taxes is reduced to the 1975 level, the total tax levy in 1976 would be about $12.5 million, or 33 per cent higher than the 1975 tax levy. And several county legislators have suggested that another 10 per cent can be trimmed from the proposed budget without seriously affecting services.

All this has prompted some cynics to suggest that the contingency fund and the increase in the unpaid tax allowance were added to the budget for just one purpose: to be eliminated later to mollify disgruntled taxpayers. They contend that county taxpayers, initially threatened with an 82 per cent tax increase that legislators had no intention of approving anyway, would be considerably less dismayed by a 25 per cent tax hike and, in fact, might be downright pleased that their representatives "saved" them 57 per cent. County officials vehemently deny, however, that such Machiavellian schemes were a part of this year's budget preparations.

Another important aspect of the county's financial picture may get an airing at tonight's public hearing: that still unofficial suggestion of a one per cent increase in the county sales tax. Adoption of that measure, on top of other extreme reductions that are apparently possible in the proposed '76 budget, could conceivably result in a property tax decrease next year.

Whatever ultimately happens, taxpayers won't have long to wait. The budget has to be passed by Dec. 20, and the next three weeks are likely to see several legislative sessions where the cuts come fast and furious.

In the meantime, all the attention is focused on tonight's hearing, and WHITA (We've Had It Taxpayers Association) is already bristling . . . but not because of the gloomy financial picture. WHITA's executive committee has chastised the legislature for scheduling tonight's hearing in the legislative chambers, where a standing-room-only crowd isn't uncommon because there are so few seats available to the public. WHITA feels the hearing should be held in a larger auditorium to more comfortably accommodate the public. Despite the prospects of a packed house tonight, WHITA has urged all interested taxpayers to attend the hearing.

Beached

A boy and his dog contemplate the riverscape complete with tanker, at Kingston Point Beach. Ariane Grossi and his puppy were taking advantage of record high temperatures Sunday. The mercury got to a balmy 56 degrees. However, bundling might be in order tonight as a seasonable cold front goes through the Mid-Hudson area carrying the chance of flurries through Tuesday. Reid Promises Firm Action To Protect Catskill Waters

ROSCOE

The commissioner of the Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) has promised to take whatever legal action is necessary to force New York City to undertake a more responsible management of its water supply system in the Catskill region.

But Ogden Reid emphasized that he hopes the department will be able, instead, to work out a "clear and precise" agreement with the city in order to avoid a legal confrontation.

For Ulster County in particular, the issue involves New York City's operation of the Shandaken portal, which controls the flow of water between the Schoharie Reservoir and the Ashokan Reservoir. Environmentalists have charged that inopportune releases and shut-downs at the portal have resulted in severe damage to fishlife in the Esopus Creek.

Speaking at the recent meeting of Catskill Waters, Commissioner Reid stated, "I feel very strongly that the state must have the power and does have the power, it is clear, to regulate the flow of water incident to our environmental needs."

"We are prepared to act within the department and in concert with the Attorney General, to take any legal steps that may be required, any legislative steps that may be required."

Reid's uncompromising stand on the issue has apparently softened the attitude of Catskill Waters members, who had earlier threatened to call for the commissioner's resignation if he did not take significant steps to bring about an agreement with the city.

'State Must, Does Have The Power'

John N. Hoeko, president of Catskill Waters, expressed satisfaction with Reid's stand, but warned that continued pressure is needed to bring about the necessary changes.

"Mr. Reid expressed solid commitment to work toward the satisfactory resolution of New York City reservoir management. He has welcomed and, indeed, asked for continued input from Catskill Waters," said Hoeko. "We now know the extent of DEC commitment, but executive action by Ogden Reid via the governor is but one course of action to follow. If the DEC cannot deliver, we must continue to increase public pressure and look toward the legislative and judicial arms of government."

Reid let little doubt that he views the problem as a serious one. "There has been serious mismanagement by the city and state of the Catskill waters," he commented, "there has been a desecration of the rivers and attendant waters I've looked at the record . . . which indicates only a partial awareness of the problem, and certainly no clear and timely commitment for action."

Apparently referring to discussions the department has already held with the city concerning improved management of the upstate reservoir system, Reid stated, "No one is particularly interested in a few more fireside chats with city hall. I think what we are interested in is a plan of action."

The "plan of action" that the DEC has proposed involves improved orchestration of the Shandaken portal to minimize the effects of changing water flows on the environment of the Esopus Creek, as well as additional water releases out of the Neversink Reservoir and Cannonsville Reservoirs to improve the stability of downstream areas. Reid said the DEC will seek cooperation from the city lacking that, it will take legal measures to guarantee that the plan is implemented.

Tax Boost, $50 Rebate

WASHINGTON — White House advisers seek a hefty tax on motor gasoline to curb its use. A special panel called for a 10 cents a gallon tax in the 1980s.

With imports growing and hopes for spectacular growth in domestic production limited, a federal energy panel made up of representatives from the highest councils of the administration recommended new gas taxes.

The panel coupled its recommendation Sunday with a call for a $50 annual tax rebate to ease the burden on the lower income families that the panel said consumed less fuel anyway.

Retaliation Bombs in Dublin

DUBLIN, Ireland — Irish police say they believe two bombs that shattered Dublin's international airport Saturday were planted by Britons in retaliation for the Irish Republican Army's bomb campaign in London.

Police sources said Sunday the fact that none of the Northern Ireland Protestant groups that had threatened such bombings claimed responsibility for this one seemed to indicate British responsibility.

Brezhnev Keynote Speaker

MOSCOW — The Communist party announced today Secretary General Leonid I. Brezhnev will give the keynote speech at next February's party congress. Western diplomats said this was a strong hint Brezhnev intends to continue in power.

Moscow radio said the decision was taken by the 228-member Central Committee of the party in a plenary session.

Key Session in Spain

MADRID, Spain — Spain's powerful Council of the Realm gathered today to pick three candidates for the key post of president of Parliament. King Juan Carlos will choose the president from the 17-man council's list.

With the approach of his politically important decision, the king of 10 days has come under mounting pressure from Communists, reformers, and right-wing Falangists.

Motorist Slain by Mistake

ORLANDO, Fla. — Investigators want a coroner's inquest to delve into the slaying of a grieving motorist by a state trooper who had been mistakenly informed the man was driving a stolen car.

Frank D. Booth Jr., 50, who headed a federally funded employment program in Brevard County, was shot and killed Saturday by trooper Robert Rennie Jr., 25, who had been told in a radio check that Booth was sitting in a stolen car. Rennie has told authorities he drew his weapon because he thought the victim was reaching for a gun.

Postal Workers to Vote

OTTAWA, Canada — Striking postal workers across Canada vote tonight on a tentative contract agreement with the federal government to end their nearly six-week-old walkout.

The 22,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers said Sunday the weekend agreement would be put before members in simultaneous nationwide meetings.

The union refused to divulge terms of the new pact, but said in a statement that the 42-day mail strike — the longest in the nation's history — was still on.

Any rumor to the contrary is unfounded, the statement said.

Sniper Fire Mars Hopes

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Lebanon's political leaders began talks today on implementing French-mediated reforms aimed at reconciling warring Christian and Moslem factions after eight months of civil war.

But hopes for immediate peace were marred by sniper fire in Beirut and Palestine guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat's prediction that "the bloodshed will continue."

Four Stores Open Sunday

KINGSTON

Four Kingston area department stores received good crowds of Sunday shoppers yesterday, although not all really wanted the Sunday business that bad.

Said the management of Britt's "We were forced to open because of the competition. We had an active day." Staff members volunteered for the work, and it is understood that Montgomery Wards and a few others will reportedly join those now open with the lack of Blue Law enforcement.

Big Scot was open for the second Sunday. "No question, we had a terrific turnout," commented a member of management.

Mammoth Mart had a "very good experience," and a store official said it would remain open Sundays at least until Christmas. Caldor's, also open for the first time, had no comments.

Library Fund Growing

KINGSTON

Kingston area residents are continuing to "respond from the heart" toward the Children's Library drive.

Over the weekend, a little more than $300 was added to the initial $5,100.36 collected from local persons and organizations during last Wednesday's "Beggar's Night" campaign to raise funds for the restoration of the Children's Library which was gutted by fire Nov. 19.

The new total to date is $5,467.48. That amount does not include $122 in pledges phoned in to the fund drive headquarters at The Freeman.

The drive will continue through Christmas Eve. Contributions can be mailed, or dropped off in person, at The Freeman office on Hurley Avenue.

All the monies collected are being placed in a special account to be used by the Children's Library once the board of trustees decides what course of action it will take to restore services and materials that went up in smoke during the early morning fire on Nov. 19.

Fund drive coordinators are hoping that persons who did not contribute when volunteers conducted their door-to-door canvases during "Beggar's Night," will respond with a contribution before Dec. 24. They are also looking to the business community and civic and community organizations to help add to the fund's treasury.

Way Is Open For PLO Talks

By UPI

The U.N. Security Council has extended the mandate of peacekeeping troops on the Golan Heights and opened the way for Palestine Liberation Organization participation in next month's debate on the Middle East.

The Council, meeting at U.N. headquarters in New York, voted 13-0 Sunday night to extend for six months the mandate authorizing the presence of a 1,200-man force in the buffer zone between Israel and Syria.

The vote — with China and Iraq abstaining — came only hours before the mandate was due to expire and followed three days of intensive debate.

At the same time, the Council agreed to begin debate Jan. 12 "on the Middle East problem including the Palestinian question."

Outgoing Council President and Soviet Ambassador Yakov A. Malik read a statement prepared by Guyana, Cameroon, Mauritania and Tanzania that said:

"It is the understanding of the majority of the Security Council that when it reconvenes on 12 January 1976... the representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization will be invited to participate in the debate."

However, U.N. experts pointed out that Malik's statement was not binding since it was not an action of the full Council contained in a regularly adopted resolution.

U.S. Ambassador Daniel Patrick Moynihan said inclusion of the PLO in the forthcoming debate was "not a decision of the Council but a simple summation of the views of some of the members."

He said the United States agreed to the resolution "solely out of deference to the right of the Security Council to take up any matter it wishes."

James Murray, deputy chief of the British delegation, said it was up to the Council to decide at the time of the debate who should be invited to participate.

Israeli Ambassador Chaim Herzog said the Israeli cabinet would meet today to consider the situation.

"I see in this resolution a surrender to Syrian blackmail and Soviet dictates," Herzog said.

Syria had insisted on PLO participation in Middle East talks as a precondition to extending the U.N. mandate — a position backed by the Soviet Union.

In the Sinai Desert, Israel gave up control of the Abu Rudeis oil complex Sunday, ending the second major phase of its interim peace agreement with Egypt.

Israeli workers handed over the last of the producing oil wells to Italian technicians representing Egypt. Under terms of the agreement, Egypt will move a civilian work force into the area today.

Van Set At Plaza

KINGSTON
The Reynolds Metals Company's aluminum recycling van will be at Kingston Plaza Tuesday from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. to accept recycled aluminum products from the public.

Reynolds will pay 15 cents per pound for the aluminum brought in on Tuesday.

The aluminum should be clean and separated from all other materials. If there is a considerable quantity, it should be bagged or tied together.

Aluminum cans can be identified by their lightness, rounded bottoms and absence of seams. The Reynolds van also accepts aluminum foil and frozen food and snack containers.

Blunt Warning For Ford

Ford Arrives

President Ford and Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-Ping stand at attention during ceremonies upon Ford's arrival at the Peking Airport. To the left of the President is Mrs. Ford. (UPI)

war. This is independent of man's will.

"Today it is the country which most vehemently preaches peace that is the most dangerous source of war. Rhetoric about detente cannot cover up the stark reality of the growing danger of war."

Then, while a Chinese band played the U.S. national anthem, Ford had about 10 minutes to collect his thoughts for a response to this uncompromising assessment, which set a rather tough tone for the diplomatic negotiations to come.

Ford's response was a moderately worded but firm re-statement of the U.S. position that Washington will not take instruction from Peking on the value of detente of relations with third nations.

He said he looked forward to "frank and beneficial discussions," including "areas where our perspectives differ."

Teng's banquet speech put the first rough edge on what had been a letter-perfect — and surprisingly cordial — diplomatic welcome.

China's finest — the top political leaders available — were on hand in Mao-jacket uniforms when Air Force One touched down at 2:58 p.m. (1:58 a.m. EST), bringing Ford to try his hand at strengthening the delicate "new relationship" created three years ago by President Richard M. Nixon and the ailing Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

Later, spontaneous Chinese warmth overtook protocol and thousands of Peking residents lined three-deep along Ford's motorcade route from the city limits to his guest residence. They watched quietly as the President's 100-car motorcade passed, but, all in all, observers rated Ford's welcome both warmer and more relaxed than the greeting Nixon received in his historic 1972 visit.

The Soviet ambassador was among the many foreign diplomats who showed up at the airport — without an invitation.

Ford, accompanied by his wife Betty, daughter Susan, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and many advisers, flew in from Anchorage by way of Tokyo — a grueling trip of about 13 hours.

established three years ago by Chairman Mao Tse-tung and President Richard M. Nixon, but he made that point secondary to a gloomy assessment of prospects for war and world revolution.

"At present," Teng said, "a more important question confronts the Chinese and American people — that of the international situation...."

"The factors for both revolution and war are clearly increasing. Countries want independence, nations want liberation, and the people want revolution."

Then Teng turned his aim — clearly, although in diplomatic euphemisms — at the Soviet Union and the drive for "world hegemony" they insist the Soviets are mounting.

"The contention for world hegemony is intensifying," he said, "and, strategically, Europe is the focus for this contention."

"Such continued contention is bound to lead to a new world

PEKING (UPI) — China's top political leaders gave President Ford a warm diplomatic welcome today and then warned him bluntly that China fears the Soviets are pushing the world toward war, despite "rhetoric about detente."

"There is great disorder under Heaven," acting Premier Teng Hsiao-ping told Ford in grimly worded banquet toast that ripped into U.S.-Soviet detente only hours after Ford's arrival for a four-day visit.

Ford in his toast said the China and the United States should work to make sure the world is not dominated "by military force or pressure."

But he said the course each country would take should be determined by "our policy and method according to our differing position in the world and our perspectives of our national interest."

Teng said U.S.-Chinese relations could "realize normalization" so long as both nations followed the principles

'Let 100 Flowers Bloom'

PEKING (UPI) — President Ford may expound China's own "Let 100 Flowers Bloom" theory to Chinese leaders in explaining U.S. policy toward the Soviet Union.

The Chinese have renked at U.S. efforts to broaden detente with the Soviets. They apparently fear Washington is letting down its guard against a nation the Chinese regard as powerhungry and dangerous.

The "Let 100 Flowers Bloom" theory ushered in a liberal period in China in the mid-1950s when authorities were willing to tolerate a variety of different approaches to communism's theoretical and practical problems. That liberalism quickly vanished, replaced by a hard-line stance, when Russia was perceived as an ideological enemy.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger got the blunt end of China's disapproval of U.S.-Soviet detente when he visited Peking last month to arrange Ford's trip.

In response, Kissinger laid down U.S. policy toward China in a speech before the Economic Club of Detroit Nov. 24. It was a "carefully considered" address he fully expected Peking to have studied thoroughly before Ford's arrival.

In remarks before leaving Washington, and in speeches in Alaska en route to China, Ford repeated the theme.

Like Peking, the United States will continue to resist expansionism by the Soviet Union, he said. But Washington will not permit Peking to dictate U.S. policies or strategies toward Moscow.

At the same time, both Ford and Kissinger repeatedly have stressed areas of agreement between the United States and China.

On arrival in Anchorage, Ford told a welcoming crowd, "You know and I know that we must keep the Pacific peaceful. There are fundamental differences between American and Chinese societies. We may not agree on some issues, but we have found an important area of common ground. Our mutual opposition to military expansion in Asia is basic. So is our pledge of noninterference in the internal affairs of other nations. I will seek to strengthen the understanding and to further advance a relationship based on mutual respect and mutual accommodation."

U.S. officials flying to Peking were certain the Chinese got the message.

They believe acting premier Teng Hsiao-ping and other Chinese officials, will be easier on Ford.

Kissinger said in his Detroit speech both the United States and China "have parallel concerns that the world may be free from domination by military force or intimidation."

Kissinger said this had been reaffirmed by both countries and each would oppose the attempts of others to do so.

"Our commitment to this policy will not change," Kissinger said.

"The United States will continue to resist expansionism as we have throughout the entire post-war period. But we also will avoid needless confrontations. We will not be swayed from our effort to improve relations with potential adversaries and to build a more stable international environment."

Crucial Oil Battle Set for This Week

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — If man had to pick one place not to drill oil wells it could quite easily be the sunlit ocean waters off the shoreline beaches of Southern California.

But that's where the oil is. That is the crux of a classic battle between those who put the beauty of America first and those who feel they are realists about the needs of an industrial society in an energy short world.

The battle has been going on quietly but bitterly for months. It should reach a climax this week in a federal court in Washington where the state of California and 15 communities are seeking a delay.

If the court does not issue a restraining order, the Interior Department on Dec. 11 will open bids from an estimated 17 oil companies for exploratory drilling and development of 1.25 million acres of ocean floor bed.

The area to be leased is divided into 235 tracts, each about nine miles square. It is also divided into four groupings totaling 1,950 square miles — considerably larger than the state of Rhode Island.

The waters affected stretch from a point about 20 miles off Santa Barbara down to San Clemente and as far out as 110 miles.

At the last moment, the Interior Department withdrew from bidding another section lying just off the shore of Santa Monica Bay. It earlier exempted the area off San Diego on Defense Department warnings that oil-gas exploration there could disrupt one of the nation's biggest and most vital military complexes.

Looming over all the arguments pro and con are two events of the past six years:

— The blowout of a big well in 1969 on federal land in the Santa Barbara Channel which left a coating of oil on the shoreline of one of the most beautiful communities in the world

— The Arab oil boycott which brought home just how vulnerable the United States is in the field of energy.

It is a tremendously complicated situation in which there are really no good guys or bad guys.

Opponents of the Dec. 11 auction acknowledge the country must develop its own oil and gas resources. They argue that drilling and development should proceed cautiously until the environmental consequences are understood and safeguards taken.

Supporters say the overriding consideration is that the oil is needed, is needed now and that environmentalists really want to prevent exploration and drilling completely, not temporarily.

One of the biggest unknowns is just how much oil lies beneath the Outer Continental Shelf area marked off for leasing. There is a tremendous difference in the estimates.

The U.S. Geological Survey reported the potential recoverable resources total between 1.6 and 2.7 billion barrels of oil. The Western Oil and Gas Association (WOGA), representing the companies, estimates from 6 to 19 billion barrels with a consensus around 14 billion.

That compares to 9.5 billion barrels on Alaska's North Slope.

The Geological Survey estimates there is between 2.4 and 4.8 trillion cubic feet of natural gas in the offshore area. WOGA estimates there is as much as 28 trillion cubic feet of gas.

Figuring the present cost of $12 a barrel for imported oil, the Southern California area has a buried treasure of from $19 to $228 billion in oil depending on which figure you accept as the total resource.

Preliminary studies indicated as many as 62 giant platforms of the "Texas tower" type may be required. During the exploratory stage they will loom above the ocean surface as high as 17-story buildings.

Those production platforms are expected to be used in water depths up to 1,200 feet. Subsea wells on the ocean floor would be used in deeper water and perhaps close to shore for aesthetic purposes. The state has control of the ocean shelf out to three miles.

The Interior Department compiled an environmental report on the project which runs approximately 3,000 pages.

There is agreement on one point — oil spillage is inevitable and blowouts of the size of the Santa Barbara accident are more than possible. The companies say new technology has reduced the chances of major spills tremendously.

But there are sharp disagreements on the effects of spillage on marine life, plankton, commercial and sport fishing, recreational boating, pollution of beaches, endangering of birds and animals on small rocky islands and hazards to navigation.

One principal argument advanced by the state-city coalition is that a distinction should be made between the exploratory stage which is expected to take about five years and production which is expected to go to the year 2020 when the fields will be depleted.

They contend that the Interior Department should have the right to withdraw the lease rights should the early operations on tortuous bottom terrain in an area subject to earthquakes prove oil spillage and pollution greater than anticipated.

The oil companies resist such a proviso. They say it would have the effect of drawing the government into oil exploration and also would put them in a position of expending vast sums for exploration with no guarantee of profit or even recovering the money.

The controversy has divided the country sectionally.

Forces calling for delay have the support of Alaska, Delaware, Maine, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York which also have concerns about offshore leasing.

But they get little sympathy from Louisiana and Texas which have far larger offshore fields already in operation in the Gulf of Mexico.

There is pressure for going ahead with drilling from the oil-short Middle West. Among letters in the files of the Interior Department are communications from the governors of Arkansas, Kansas and Nebraska.

"Inasmuch as the state of Nebraska contributes to the common good of our country and the world by its abundant production of foodstuffs, we believe that each state should contribute to this country's common good with whatever natural resources are available," wrote Gov. James J. Exon.

Our Lagging Commerce

The New York State Department of Audit and Control recently concluded a 15-year economic survey of the state and there were few surprises.

For instance, The state's economic growth rate has declined and taxes have risen. The state certainly didn't need a survey for those two statistics. A declining economy and higher taxes have been going on in other parts of the country, also.

The survey, however, does give some thought-provoking findings as these conditions reflect political direction or influence on the state's economy during this 15-year period.

The political factors begin with the fact that this survey and its findings appeared at all. They prove the question whether Nelson Rockefeller, given other direction during that period, might have maintained for the state an economic growth on a par or better than comparable states.

The most significant conclusion to the report is that while manufacturing activity in New York State showed a marked decline, the philosophy of the department continued along the lines that this was the major component of its economy and that other segments of business activity would flourish automatically if manufacturing activity was promoted.

In another section of the report, an audit of state agencies showed a lack of management controls, inefficient administration and plenty of expansive claims of individual or divisional activity or achievement, when, as a matter of fact, none actually had taken place.

Regional offices had directed their attention exclusively to expansion of manufacturing activity and their personnel failed to follow up some leads, reported contacts or personal visits not actually made and otherwise misrepresented their actual activities.

A disparity between tax growth at an annual average of 8.8 per cent and per capita personal income growth of only 5.5 per cent is a prime area of focus for public policy makers, the survey found.

The Freeman suggests that the report spells out for those who needed it the major reason for today's financial troubles in both New York State and New York City.

The report covers the years 1958 through 1972. Accompanying it is an audit from April 1, 1972 through Dec. 31, 1974, when Governor Carey took office.

Albany Ave. Cemetery

Editor, The Freeman:

Now and then I dream again of things from here and there. I even dream of Jeannie with the light brown hair.

I toss and stir almost to the point of wakefulness, wrestling with poignant thoughts passing through my mind as I engage in my imaginary nocturnal stroll. The slumber of deep sleep gives way to ogreish apparitions that lay siege of my sense. As I continue to saunter, gradually through the veiled haze of which dreams are made there comes into focus the scene of the crime, the little unused and seemingly forgotten hallowed burying ground — the neglected and forsaken little cemetery on Albany Ave. just off Broadway practically in the center of our lovely historic city.

Picking my way through the maze of vandalized and fallen monuments I pause in my stroll and examine what remains of the once orderly tombstones. Shades of the Civil War and the period reaching back towards the Revolution, and other unreadable from the erosive years. There appear such names as solid as the foundation of which this country was built — DeWitt, O'Neil, Eckert, Cole. The list reads on. They are all here — crying out in silent protest at the hustling, bustling, disdainful world — just inches away — trampling about their lifeless bones.

The dream continues. Could it be imaginary? Could it just be possible that in this Bicentennial year that the Committee might take notice — might see fit to acknowledge these honored dead — many being veterans in their own right of our country's cause — to assure them of a small part in celebrating the 200 years of gratitude by perhaps placing them on a pedestal as it were?

Oh yes, the murky mist seems to be getting clearer. Could the heirs be searched out? Could steps be taken to eliminate the ravage and disorder of this hallowed ground and to bring some semblance of respect to these honored dead? Yes, there seems to be a spark — a number of acquiescent thoughts shuffling around in X number of minds, not only to eliminate the broken stones above their bones but to prevent further desecrating causes.

The dream becomes quite clear now and begins to unfold in its finality. Here is a beautiful little sector that could be utilized by the young as well as the old in tribute to the ages. In substance it would become a neighborhood park — a monument in itself — just off the teeming highways and byways. To eliminate the prevalence of vandalism of the grave stones, my dream sees a removal of most of them and erected in their stead a single well-situated and suitable monument dedicated to all the hallowed occupants.

There would be a section for the young to play in respect and harmony, and there would be a sector for the elderly to stroll and rest. Now once more the current little eyesore — this grubby looking place could regain respect in the community as in days of yore and become a district asset to the City of Kingston as it takes part in celebrating our country's liberty under the Grace of God.

Well, a body can dream, can't he?

Reservoir Building

Editor, The Freeman:

The Ashokan Waters works is visited by many people, but do they know or do they observe the large building dedicated to the late Benjamin C. Nesin? Who was Benjamin C. Nesin?

From the "THE Pipeline" published by the Department of Water Supply, Gas, and Electricity, of New York City, March 15, 1964, we read:

"We mourn the loss on January 28, 1964, of Benjamin C. Nesin, Director of Laboratories of our Department.

Mr. Nesin was appointed as Chemist in 1927. He was chemist in charge of the Mt. Prospect Laboratory from 1931 to 1945. In 1945, he was appointed Director of Laboratories.

His was the responsibility for water treatment and water supply safety for our Department. Among his varied duties were: directed five laboratories, control of water supply and sewage treatment plants, responsible for all problems of water supply toxicology and in general all matters related to the safety and general quality of the New York City water supply system. He established the present system of watershed control of pollution and contamination, and conducted investigations on the toxicological problems concerned with water supply. These included the control of herbicidal and insecticidal materials which may be discharged upon watersheds, methods for screening watersheds for toxic agents, the rapid determination of arsenic, lead, nerve poisons, war gases, and other deleterious materials in water supplies, the use of guppies as test animals in water supply toxicology, etc. He was the Author of many departmental reports on the subject of fluoridation.

He was a member of the American Water Works Association, Long Island Water Conference, New England Water Works Association, Biological Stain Commission, American Public Health Association, New York Academy of Science, New Jersey Academy of Science, National Association of Corrosion Engineers. Mr. Nesin was one of the ranking members of the Interdepartmental board for the Sanitary Control and Protection of the Public Water Supply.

These are but the bare facts. No mention is made of his trip to Israel at the invitation of that government to help Israel with its water supply problems. No mention is made of the respect lavished upon him by his fellow members in the department and his associates in the various societies. "Over my dead body, will they fluoridate New York City Water." This statement was made by Mr. Nesin, and indeed, New York City Water was fluoridated the year following his death. His discourse on fluoridation is available to anyone who wishes it at my home, 43 Stephan Street, Kingston, N.Y.

Inside Report

A Wayward Bus

By Rowland Evans
and Robert Novak

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Long before Sen. George McGovern arrived here Sunday to exploit polarization of the Democratic party on forced school busing, it was unmistakably clear that even among advanced liberals the mood was surprisingly hostile to any such confrontation.

Consequently, the most powerful political operatives at the three-day "issues conference" put on by liberal Democrats (many of whom backed McGovern in 1972) felt betrayed by McGovern's ideological foray. If, as most Democrats here assumed, McGovern was trying to recapture the party's left in preparation for another presidential campaign, his busing speech set off a harsh backlash that is having the opposite effect.

Indeed, meticulous efforts had been made by organizers of the issues conference to avoid just the sort of party quarrel that McGovern set off with his emotional appeal for his party not to "sell its soul" on busing. "The one thing we didn't want were political harangues from either presidential candidates or activists on the floor," one conference sponsor told us before McGovern's inflammatory busing speech.

Moreover, McGovern had been specifically asked not to raise the busing issue, both by Democratic politicians here in Louisville, now being tortured by a busing crisis, and by politicians sponsoring the conference — including at least one official of the left-oriented United Auto Workers (UAW).

Irresponsible

"He was forewarned," a top UAW political operative told us. "What he did was totally and completely irresponsible. He did a disservice to the Democratic party, and if he really intends to make an effort for the nomination next year he will never get any support from anyone in this union."

But McGovern was not here for the first two days of what — before his onslaught — had been developing into a low-key, almost sporadic liberal talkfest. He did not know, or did not care, that liberal union activists — mostly from the UAW and the machinists union — were anything but enthusiastic about an issues conference that risked opening the bloody wounds of 1972.

Nor was such moderation limited to delegates on the floor at the Louisville Gardens. Signs of change within the Democratic party were also unmistakable from the speaker's platform, where liberal Democratic officeholders, past and present, gingerly stepped around ideological potholes.

An example was Mayor Kenneth Gibson of Newark, black leader of a city where 90 per cent of school children are black. Gibson appealed not for busing (saying Newark's blacks are against it), but for a return to basic education "so that our children can go forward to where this country used to be in education techniques."

Similarly, on another issue sacred to Democratic liberals — national health insurance — a certified liberal, former Gov. John J. Gilligan of Ohio, stunned his audience by coming out against any nationwide health insurance program.

"In the decade since medicare and medicaid appeared, we have poured billions into the health care delivery systems of this country" without much result, Gilligan said.

Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts, a liberal who took office last January, lamented "the failing Great Society programs" built on the presumed power of Washington to solve all problems. To the contrary, Dukakis said, the place for more government lies in the town, county and state, not in the nation's capital with its remote, all-powerful bureaucracy.

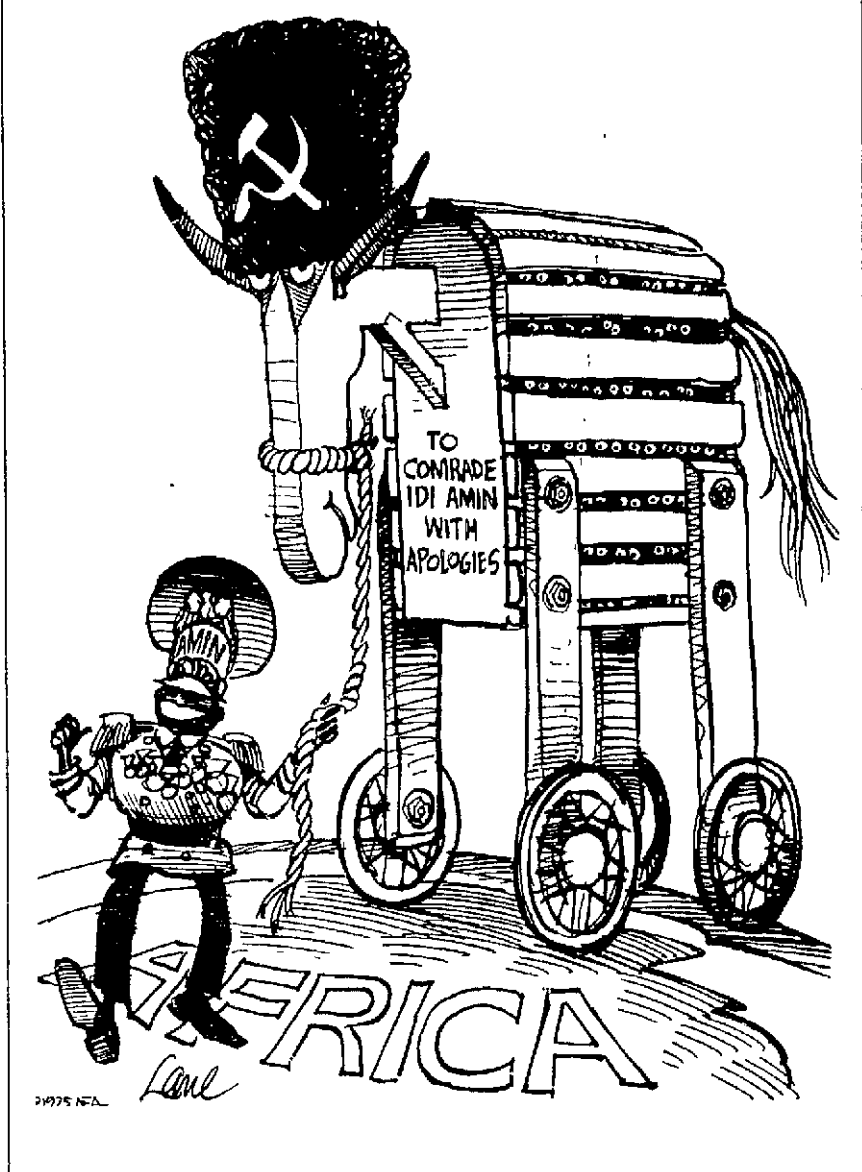

Perhaps the most down-to-earth change in liberal Democratic politics of 1976 as contrasted to McGovernite confrontation politics of 1972 came from a UAW official in regular and intimate touch with political sentiments in his union, whose rank-and-file is considerably less liberal than its leadership. He swept his arm over the conference and spat out an expletive to us: "We don't need an issues conference today because every good Democrat knows there is only one issue, and that is jobs, jobs and jobs."

In Their Own Way

One after another, each of the presidential candidates who showed up here said the same thing in his own way, steering away from the ideological masochism that wrecked their party in 1972.

But George McGovern tried to change the mood, thundering his demand for ideological purity on busing as an overture for offering himself once again as a sacrificial nominee to assure that purity is achieved. There were few takers here in Louisville. Even this liberal conference wanted to get out from under the long, self-destructive shadow of 1972.

Grisly Tactics On Rosenbergs

By Jack Anderson with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Newly released documents have revived interest in the case of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, who were executed for espionage 22 years ago. But still buried is the stark story of how the FBI plotted to wring a confession from Julius by executing his wife first.

It was the FBI's grisly hope that Julius, horrified by the trauma of his wife's death and his own impending electrocution, would blurt out a last-minute confession.

The late FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover was worried about public doubts that the Rosenbergs were guilty, doubts that still stubbornly persist. Hoover wanted a dramatic, 11th-hour confession to clear up the doubts.

The FBI was convinced, according to our sources, that the Rosenbergs not only were guilty but that the strong-willed Ethel was preventing her weaker husband from confessing.

Indeed, the FBI had learned from Julius Rosenberg's cellmate, a secret FBI informer, that he had admitted guilt. The informer's reputation for credibility, however, was uncertain, so the second-hand confession couldn't be used.

The FBI needed an admission from Julius' own lips. An attempt was made, therefore, to make sure Ethel went to the electric chair first. An agent was standing by, with an open line to Washington, ready to relay the first words of the stunned husband's confession.

But the FBI was unable to change the execution schedule. Julius was executed first, then his wife 10 minutes later. Neither gave a dying confession.

DOUBLE AGENT?: Daniel Rathbun may be the most valuable double-agent in the history of corporate intrigue. Or he may be an innocent, unwise in the ways of public perceptions.

In any event, his story is a fascinating one.

Rathbun headed up perhaps the most crucial government study in a decade: how much oil and gas is really available in the United States. The study will be a basis for many far-reaching domestic and foreign policy decisions.

The need for such a study was obvious. In the past, the government had only the word of the oil and gas industry. And their word on oil and gas reserves, it was suspected, was heavily influenced by the profit motive. No one was really sure whether there was an energy crisis, or whether the industry was simply holding out for higher prices.

So Congress authorized the study in 1973, and Daniel Rathbun was placed in direct command. Early last month, the study was completed. It gave the industry a clean bill of health, assuring that the figures compiled by the American Petroleum Institute were essentially accurate.

Now here's the rub. Daniel Rathbun has turned up on the American Petroleum Institute payroll. This is a little like a judge going to work for a man he just declared not guilty; it raises doubts about the integrity of the verdict.

Rathbun and his former employers at the Federal Energy Administration hotly deny any impropriety. Eric Zausner, Rathbun's former boss at FEA, claims that Rathbun could not have influenced the study on behalf of industry because it was "locked in cement" over a year ago.

One FEA official confided, nevertheless, that Energy Czar Frank Zarb "hit the roof" when he heard of Rathbun's defection to industry.

They point out that the questionnaires sent out by Rathbun to oil and gas producers were heavily influenced by the American Petroleum Institute. Consumer groups were allowed to make suggestions only after they kicked up their heels. But in the end, many of their suggestions were included in the crucial questionnaire.

To make matters even stickier, Rathbun himself has been neither a saint nor a sinner in anyone's eyes while a public servant. Some of his decisions as a deputy assistant administrator have angered consumer groups, and some have angered the industry. Everyone agrees he is a top-flight statistician.

Rathbun himself told our associate Jack Cloherly that he sees no conflict since he will not be involved in date collection at the AFI.

But Rathbun's move to industry casts a shadow over the government's "independent" oil and gas reserve findings.

An Awesome Open Secret

The generals in the Pentagon say that Israel has one good war left in her. After that — what? The holocaust? I doubt it. There are military whippers that Israel has nuclear weapons.

It is called an "open secret." If so, it is one that Henry Kissinger hasn't told us. One of the ironies in the life of our butterfly Secretary of State is that the more problems he solves, the more he is held in suspicion here and abroad.

In press conferences, he is as coy as a sex fiend in a convent. He seldom reveals his intentions. Most of us who listen subtract what he says from what he didn't say and try to reach a quotient.

If little Israel is a nuclear power, Kissinger would do well to explain it to the Arab world. Goliath should know that David now has a slingshot of awesome proportions. In any diplomatic game, hydrogen bombs are the ace of trump.

'Just Models'

The last time I sat with General Itzhak Rabin in an innocent-looking, vine-covered cottage near Tel Aviv, he had a bookcase laden with missile models. I asked if Israel had the big ones. "Just models," he said modestly.

It seemed embarrassing that a grown man would collect toys. The playthings have matured. They are standing in hidden fields — deadly asparagus. They also hang from the wings of bombers.

This alters the balance of power in the Middle East. Thirty-eight million Moslems have the oil and the money. Three million people have the power to destroy the Arab world.

Such destruction could easily include the oil fields of Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and Iran. This, in turn, would bring Western civilization to a screeching halt. No oil — no industry.

In such circumstances it is difficult to understand why, in the past two years, American and European public opinion has turned away from Israel. The swing is more than a modified anti-Israel stance. It is pro-Arab. The West has drenched itself in crude oil.

The Rabin government will not announce its nuclear capability — assuming Israel has it — because such weapons are a vice as well as a virtue. The unwritten rule in the nuclear club is, "He who has them must not use them."

Tactically they are worth a lot solely as a threat. The U.S. and the U.S.S.R. have poured scores of billions into such weapons as a ghastly presence. If one button is pressed accidentally, if one button flies the night skies to another nation, Mother Earth will be reduced to a floating dark cinder.

Each has the power of overkill; each knows that it can not be used. This leads to a question: Under what circumstances would Israel use atom and hydrogen bombs? Perhaps if its people were being pushed into the sea.

If it happened, radioactive dust would sweep the world between the 30th and 20th parallels and scores of millions of people would die. Thus the question reverts from the strategic to the moral. Has any nation the right to kill millions of innocents in other lands?

Peace or Perish?

No. Could it happen? Yes. Could it be prevented? Of course. If those muscular big brothers, the U.S.S.R. and the U.S.A., would sit together and hammer out a final peace for Israeli and Arab, and impose it on the Middle East, the several nations could revert to industrial pursuits.

Sooner, rather than later, the Arab oil billions will buy nuclear weapons. They have both the money and the hate. Saudi Arabia can make an offer which no one can refuse. It is in the interest of America and Russia to seek peace in the Middle East now.

Will they? No. One assumes that Gerald Ford comprehends less than what Henry Kissinger tells him. The President's most recent gesture was to endorse sending 200 Americans to stand in no-man's-land between the Egyptian and Israeli forces. This is akin to sending a boy armed with a water pistol to fight a fire in a dynamite factory.

It no longer matters who is pro-Israel and who is pro-Arab. Peace in the Middle East is of paramount importance to my country, the United States of America . . .

Montessori School Coming to Kingston

KINGSTON A new nursery school and kindergarten, the Mid-Hudson Montessori Children's House, located in St. James United Methodist Church on Pearl and Fair Streets, Kingston, will hold an open house Tuesday, Dec. 9 at 8 p.m. The purpose of the meeting will be to introduce parents of young children to Montessori methods and materials by way of demonstration and film.

The Children's House, named after Maria Montessori's own Casa Dei Bambini in Rome at the turn of the century, will continue the spirit of the great educator. Children's House director, Robert Murphy, a Montessori-trained teacher, feels that the essential insights of Montessori are just as valid today in America as they were in Rome 70 years ago. "In fact," says Murphy, "her conviction that the pre-school years are crucially important to children's development through all the learning years is now supported by educators and some psychologists who believe that 85 per cent of a child's intelligence is formed by age five."

The Children's House will begin its program in January. Enrollment and registration information will be provided at the open house. More information may be obtained by contacting the school.

St. Nicholas and Black Peter Pageant to Unfold at Old Dutch

KINGSTON Carrying on a tradition that was begun more than 25 years ago, Old Dutch Church will once again bring the true story of Saint Nicholas and his small friend, Black Peter, to residents of Kingston and the surrounding area Friday, Dec. 5 at 7 p.m.

The festivities begin with Saint Nicholas and Black Peter riding down Wall Street, and arriving at the churchyard at the corner of Wall and Main Streets. There, they will be greeted by a typical Dutch family in authentic costume. The story of the real "Santa Claus" will be told to the children. The Dutch family will be portrayed by members of the congregation, Mr. and Mrs. Hank Rosier and their children.

For those viewing the scene, the story will be read by the Rev. Abraham DeVries, domine of the historic church. Special music also will be provided to add a festive note to this occasion.

Saint Nicholas will be riding

a white horse which has been provided by Chris Day from the Woodstock Stables.

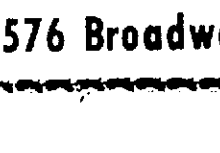

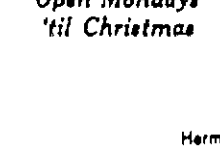

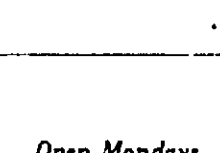

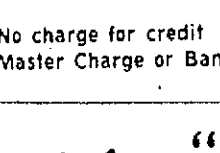

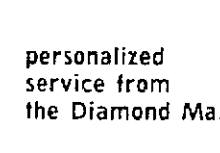

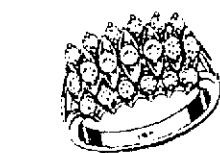

The many lovely tales told of the saintly Bishop who arrives in a red Bishop's robe and his white beard have been handed down for centuries, and so it is that children look forward to his greeting and gifts of candy for all those young ones who have been especially good throughout the year.

The public is invited to attend this joyous event.

Sharing Their Blessings At Thanksgiving

Students of the Kingston Catholic School have good feelings these days after last Thursday's Thanksgiving celebration. Before these students enjoyed their own feast, however, they prepared baskets of Thanksgiving treats for some of the less fortunate in our area. Here Amy Ambrose (L), Larry Johnson, Erik Dunn, Kim Glasser and Jacqueline Dempsey join in filling the baskets for the needy. The entire student body of the school presented the food items at the offertory of the Mass in a special liturgy celebrated at St. Peter's Church with the Rev. Magr. Francis P. Brennan, pastor of the church, officiating. The Rev. Patrick Woods and the Rev. Mark Lidinsky of Mt. St. Alphonsus concelbrated at the services. (Freeman photo)

Reader's Theatre Program Set at UCCC

STONE RIDGE Rhoda R. Mones, chairperson of the Department of Speech and Theater at Ulster County Community College, has announced plans for the Fall semester program of Reader's Theatre.

The program, to be presented by the Oral Interpretation class, will take place Thursday, Dec. 11, at 2 p.m. in the College Lounge in Vanderlyn Hall on the Stone Ridge campus.

The focus of the original Reader's Theatre performance, which is presented each semester, is on a central theme put together, from a variety of sources, by the students as a class project. The theme and the title of the script is a "well-guarded" secret until the week of the program.

Mrs. Mones, the instructor for Oral Interpretation, reported that this semester's Reader's Theatre will be different in that it will be presented in the College Lounge with a comfortable fire burning, egg nog being served and holiday carols sung.

Pam Lachmann, of Saugerties, a student of the class, reported that an order has been placed for snow on Dec. 11, but she couldn't guarantee anything.

In addition to Ms. Lachmann, the students of Oral Interpretation and the performers of Reader's Theatre are:

Anna Benker, Kingston; Desiree Berg, West Hurley; Judi Booth, Kingston; Gary Cannon, Napanoch; Jo Ann M. Cicale, Kingston; Susan

Hassa, Stone Ridge; Peter Hepburn, Napanoch; Richard Hermance, Tillson; Gina Linehan, Kingston; Christopher Mabie, Port Ewen; Julie Meehan, Kerhonkson; Lynne Millson, Stone Ridge; Jon Perry, Kingston; Kathy Picciello, Woodstock; Jennifer Sheridan, New Paltz and Tom White, Kingston.

The program is open to the public, free of charge.

Preceptor Tau Chapter Activities Noted

HURLEY
Preceptor Tau Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority held its regular monthly meeting recently at the home of Mrs. Rudolph Wells, Hurley.

In view of the recent fire at the Children's Library, it was decided that the November Service project would be a cash donation from Preceptor Tau to the Children's Library.

Plans were made for the Christmas party to be held jointly with Xi Alpha Omega Chapter Tuesday, Dec. 9, at 8:00 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Roy Gonyea, Denver Road, Kingston. Secret Sisters will be revealed at the party and new ones chosen for the coming year.

Preceptor Tau's Christmas project will be the purchase of gifts to be used by the retarded children of the Emma Wygant School.

A Quad-Chapter Box Supper social will be held at the Community Room of the Heritage Savings Bank at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 13, 1976.

The next business meeting will be held at the home of Miss Blanche Cartier, 63 Groff Street, Kingston, Monday, Jan. 26 at 8 p.m.

Host Group Seeks Area Participants

NEW YORK
Ulster County area families are needed to host English-speaking European visitors as guests in their homes for a 10-day period during 1976, it was announced today by the American Host Foundation.

American Host is one of the few non-governmental programs designed to show the American way of life to foreign visitors by pairing them with American families, and has been endorsed by the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration as a nationwide home hospitality program for the bicentennial year.

Now in its 15th year, American Host has opened doors to better understanding for more than 9,000 European visitors who have passed on their new understanding of America to their colleagues and friends.

Being a "Host Family" is open to anyone who has the desire to increase understanding and friendship between Americans and Europeans. Host Families are required to provide a private room, meals for their guest, the opportunity to meet their friends and neighbors and to see places of interest in the area.

American Host arranges all transportation. Host Families are asked to meet their guest upon arrival in their area. Visitors and Host Families have an opportunity to correspond for at least a month before meeting.

Arrangements for participating as a Host Family may be made by writing to:

Art Show Now at Library

JEAN WROLSEN

TOWN OF ULSTER
Artwork by Jean Wrolsen of High Woods went on view today for a month at The Town of Ulster Library.

Predominately a black and white show, mainly drawings, it is strong on contrasts and varied in techniques. Pen, brush, ink; soft pencil, enduring wax or Conte' crayon and French charcoal, are used with precision and obvious enjoyment. The public is invited to view the exhibit during December.

Library hours are 2 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, 7 to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and on Saturday from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m.

The artist-author was born in Maryland. She first studied at Corcoran, the Art Students League of New York and with Harvey Fite. For 10 years, she was registrar of the summer school of the Art Students League at Woodstock. She has since returned there to study with Franklin Alexander and Bernard Steffen.

A wall of her work was presented in an invitational show at the Woodstock Artists Association last spring. She tutors in drawing at her High Woods home, and writes poetry, to which, she says, her drawings are a quiet accompaniment. They exist in many private collections. Works are for sale.

Jean Wrolsen is the author of Lamb's of The Catskills, a book of gentle verse.

OPEN MONDAYS

Dear Abby Says:Former Fatty Catches a Lifeline

DEAR ABBY: I send this letter out of gratitude for recommending Overeaters Anonymous. It saved my life. In December 1973 I weighed 326 pounds. If my high blood pressure or heart trouble wouldn't eventually have killed me, I'd have done it myself. I lived with loneliness, depression and despair.

I was a heroin addict and a 23-year-old divorced mother of three on welfare. I hated myself enough to prostitute my body to get money for dope. I suffered humiliation after humiliation. (A 300-pound prostitute gets all the sadists and pervers no other hooker will take.) I had no self-respect, no hope, no God—no nothing.

I wrote to you, never expecting an answer. Your letter was the first word of encouragement I had had in years. I took your advice and went to an O.A. meeting in June of '74. I believed none of it. "These people are crazy," I thought, "I'm a fat, ugly junkie, and they're telling me I can get thin and regain my self-respect if I want to!"

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

"No way," I told them right out loud. No one threw me out. A beautiful, middle aged man put his arm around my shoulder and said, "Come back and listen. Try us for 30 days. What can you lose?"

I didn't believe him, but I went back and back and back. Today I've lost 121 pounds, and I'm still losing. I'm drug free, and I'm learning to like myself. I have a responsible job, a belief in a power greater than myself, and the love and respect of my children and people who believe in me when I didn't believe in myself.

There is no scale at O.A. They don't shame you if you backslide. They are a group of loving, caring, supportive people who are there to help you because they have been helped themselves.

After sinking so low, O.A. gave me a chance to be what I've always wanted to be: a lady.

How can I thank you for sending me there?
"BORN AGAIN" IN GROTON, CONN.

DEAR BORN AGAIN: You owe me no thanks. I merely threw you a lifeline. You caught it.

DEAR ABBY: I am 14-years-old and need your help. My girl friend's mother lets her kids call her "Rosemary." I think that's neat.

I tried calling my mon "Shirley," and I nearly got a hit the head.

How can I get my mon to get with it like my girl friend's mother?

SANDY

DEAR SANDY: If by "getting with it," you mean she should allow you to call her by her first name, I can't help you. Respect your mother's right to be addressed according to her wishes. If you have children and want them to call you

A Joyeux Noel Gala Dec. 20

ANNANDALE-ON-HUDSON Blithewood Manor at Bard College will be the site of a Joyeux Noel Gala for the benefit of the Northern Dutchess Day Care Center, Inc., a United Way agency, on Saturday, Dec. 20, from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Susan B. Davis, chairlady of the benefit, has announced that music for dancing will be provided by Gerald Boice and his band. Ticket information may be obtained from Mrs. Paul Velardi.

The Northern Dutchess Day Care Center has been providing excellent child care for children of the Red Hook-Rhinebeck area for five years. The present director of the center is Ralph Roe, a graduate of SUNY at New Paltz. He has been with the center for four years. In a recent interview Roe described what sets Northern Dutchess Day Care Center apart from many other centers. A qualified staff, including three certified teachers, offers a child-centered approach out into the community, free choice of activities, and multi-age grouping provide to children with a happy, stimulating experience. In addition the center provides flexible hours and has the lowest rates for day care in the county.

However, like many agencies, special needs and more innovative programs would benefit greatly from a greater income to the center. The board anticipates that this benefit will provide the additional funds to enable the center to offer more scholarships and supply needed books for the library, more audio-visual equipment, and money to pay work study students from various local colleges.

In addition, Roe and the board are interested in parent-community educational programs which would involve an even greater circle of people in the programs and activities offered by the center.

Northern Dutchess Day Care Center is regarded a valuable community resource and the public is invited to attend the benefit gala in support of it.

Man Once Thought Helpless Aids the Handicapped

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The new director of California's state Department of Rehabilitation is shaking up the agency which once turned away thousands of severely handicapped persons, including himself.

Edward V. Roberts, 36, a quadriplegic named to the $34,104-a-year post by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., has ordered that the department turn its priorities upside down to "help the people who really need it."

Roberts says the department now will give first priority for vocational rehabilitation services to the severely disabled in contrast to what he says was its past practice of concentrating services on persons with minor disabilities.

"We (severely disabled) were considered vegetables a few years ago," Roberts said. "The vegetables now are rising. We want to show that severely disabled persons can take charge of their own lives."

The department's mission is to help make physically and mentally handicapped persons more employable by providing special training, medical services and special appliances, such as artificial limbs.

Since the state vocational rehabilitation program was started 54 years ago, more than 200,000 handicapped persons have been rehabilitated into jobs in California. Eighty per cent of the department's costs are met by federal funds.

Roberts, an easy-going man who exudes a contagious enthusiasm about his new job, lost the use of his arms and legs at age 14 because of polio.

He said his appointment as rehabilitation director in October marked the first time a quadriplegic had been named to a high-level position in either government or business.

He was co-founder and executive director of the Center for Independent Living, a Berkeley organization operated by the disabled to aid other disabled persons. He said the center became a "national model" for similar programs.

Robert said the department "traditionally has played a statistical game" by aiding persons with easily remedied handicaps because it would produce statistics showing a high rate of success with little effort or expense.

"And routinely, people like myself, who had the most need, were rejected as unfeasible," said Roberts, adding the department considered such cases "more difficult and costly."

Roberts said he refused to be rejected and "fought his way into the system."

However, he said, thousands of people were turned down by the department over the years because the agency declared the severely disabled could not be rehabilitated due to the seriousness of their handicaps.

Roberts, who is confined to a wheelchair, said with help this severely disabled can overcome their handicaps and lead self-sufficient lives.

"The time has come," he said, "for disabled people to be recognized for their strengths — strengths that come from overcoming a severe disability and becoming independent."

Under Roberts' new policy, only disabled persons with moderate to severe disabilities will receive vocational rehabilitation services from the department. The policy won't affect persons already receiving services from the department.

The highest priority will go to those in the severely disabled category, including the blind, deaf, quadriplegics, persons suffering from severe cases of orthopedic, epileptic, cardiac, circulatory, respiratory and mental impairment and multiple sclerosis and muscular dystrophy.

Roberts said his appointment as rehabilitation director should encourage the disabled that they, too, can succeed. He said it also should help convince employers to hire the handicapped.

"I'm no super hero," he said. "When I was 14 I was totally dependent. I went through a lot of levels to improve myself. I took charge of my own life. I found out I had a brain."

Skillful Moscow Thieves Steal Anything Wheeled

MOSCOW (UPI) — Lock your car doors, comrade. Don't park on dark streets or lose your vehicle registration papers, either.

Gangs of car thieves are operating in Moscow. With cars increasingly common in a city that had few private vehicles only a decade ago, the car theft problem has become so serious that police set up a special department to deal with it.

This unusual disclosure was made recently by the government newspaper Izvestia, which as a rule follows the Soviet practice of playing up crime in the West while all but denying its existence at home.

Statistics on the growth of car thievery in the Soviet Union are not available. Izvestia just said that a special police unit had been established "to improve efficiency in preventing this sort of crime."

Yet official concern clearly is reflected both by the need authorities felt to create the new department and by their decision to publicize the struggle against one highly successful robber band.

How did the gang operate? Much the same as its Western counterparts.

There were 12 men in all, each an "expert." One was a document forger, another the actual thief. A distinguished-looking gang member acted as the bogus "owner" when stolen cars were being sold. Others acted as go-betweens or drivers.

"Sometimes they stole a car spontaneously, just when they saw it," Izvestia said. "Sometimes they would search entire areas of the city to find a car with exactly the right color."

The stolen vehicle would be hidden while the forger, named Silivonov, prepared "clean" registration papers and other documents.

Then — in a city where buying a new car requires a wait of a year or more — the sale was no problem.

In one case, Izvestia said, the gang sold an old black Volga Sedan, which retails new for $11,920, to two brothers from Uzbekistan for $15,900.

Before police managed to track them down, the gang snatched 18 cars and disposed of them all successfully.

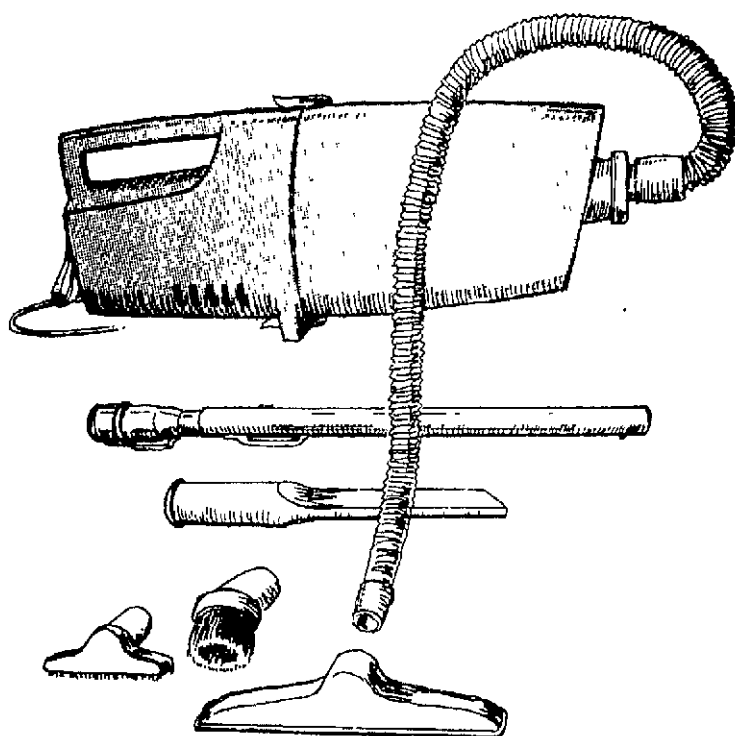

But private cars — there are only about 150,000 of them in Moscow — are not the only target for thieves. Izvestia said taxis, trucks, motorcycles, buses and even mobile cranes are fair game.

Col. Mikhail Klukov, a member of the new bureau, blamed "drunkards" and thrillseekers for most of the thefts, which he said were "a stairway to the prisoner's dock because sooner or later practically every stolen vehicle is found."

In the case of the Silivonov gang, the penalty was severe. Izvestia said he was jailed for 14 years and his accomplices for no less than three years each.

Same Old Story for Raiders

By UPI

It's the same old story for the Oakland Raiders — another division title and another tough road to the Super Bowl. The Raiders clinched the AFC's West Division title in the National Football League Sunday when they scored a 37-34 overtime victory over the Atlanta Falcons on a dramatic field goal by 48-year old George Blanda.

But to Oakland management, players and fans the reaction was: so far, so good but also so what?

The Raiders have won four straight division titles and eight in nine years but remain the prime examples that the road to the Super Bowl is filled with pitfalls. The Raiders have gone on to play in only one Super Bowl and were wiped out in that one, 33-14, by the Green Bay Packers.

This time around, the Raiders face the prospect of having to win over two teams with superior records during the season — the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Minnesota Vikings, both now 10-1 compared to Oakland's 9-2 record.

The defending Super Bowl champion Steelers ran their winning streak to a club record nine games with a 20-7 triumph over the New York

Jets Sunday while the Vikings also have a 10-1 mark despite a 31-30 loss to the Washington Redskins. At the moment the records favor the Steelers and Vikings to meet again in the Super Bowl with the Raiders watching on television.

"Then you worry about whom you play and where. We have passed the first obstacle, but there's a long way to go. Of course, our goal is the Super Bowl. Nothing else counts."

Blanda kicked an 18-yard field goal with three seconds

the Vikings their first loss of the season and keep their own playoff hopes alive.

Bengals 23 Oilers 19

John Reaves threw two touchdown passes in a 16-point second period which gave the Bengals control of a

Packers 28 Bears 7

John Brockington scored on three runs from inside the 10-yard line as the Packers scored an easy win over the Bears. The Packers led 28-0 at halftime and stifled both the Bears' passing and running attacks.

Eagles 27 49ers 17

Mike Boryla threw touchdown passes of five, 11 and 42 yards leading the Eagles to their third win in 11 games. Boryla's 42-yarder to Charlie Young clinched the game for the Eagles in the fourth period. Horst Muhlmann started the Eagles' scoring with field goals of 51 and 42 yards.

Browns 17 Saints 16

Greg Pruitt ran eight yards for a touchdown and Don Cockroft kicked the extra point with 3:12 to play giving the Browns their second straight victory and leaving both they and the Saints with 2-9 records.

Broncos 13 Chargers 10

Jim Turner kicked a 25-yard field goal in sudden-death overtime as the Broncos handed the Chargers their 11th straight defeat. The winning field goal was set up when Chris Fletcher was called for pass interference on a John Hufnagel to Jack Dolbin pass at the San Diego 20.

SPORTS TODAY

The Cincinnati Bengals defeated the Houston Oilers 23-19, the Baltimore Colts beat the Kansas City Chiefs 28-14, the Green Bay Packers blitzed the Chicago Bears 28-7, the Dallas Cowboys topped the New York Giants 14-3, the Philadelphia Eagles downed the San Francisco 49ers 27-17, the Cleveland Browns shaded the New Orleans Saints 17-16, and the Denver Broncos nipped the San Diego Chargers 13-10 in other Sunday games.

The New England Patriots play the Dolphins in Miami, Fla., in the Monday night TV game.

"The first thing you have to do is get to the playoffs," said Oakland coach John Madden.

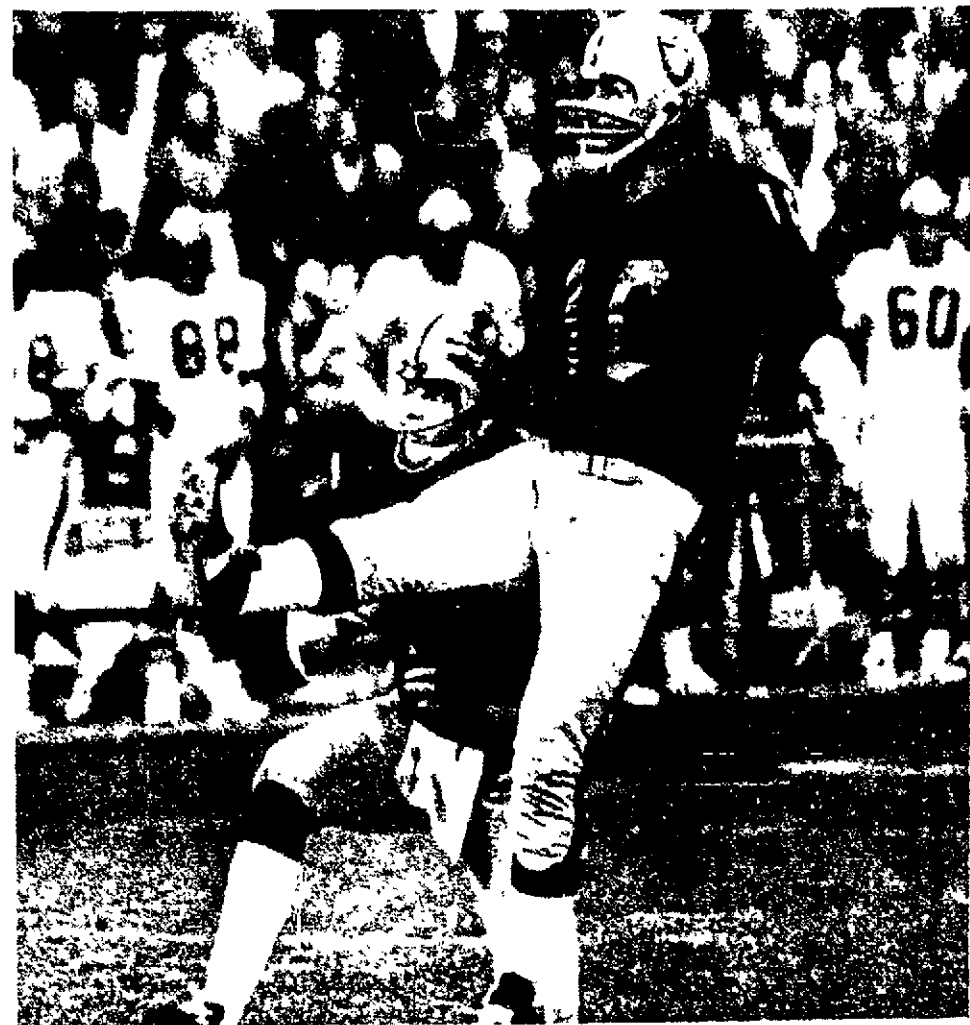

left in regulation time to tie the score at 34-34 and then booted a 36-yarder on the final play of sudden-death overtime to give the Raiders their victory. Ken Stabler threw four touchdown passes, three to Cliff Branch, for the Raiders while Steve Bartkowski threw for one TD and ran for another for the Falcons.

Redskins 31 Vikings 30

Bill Kilmer completed four passes for a total of 77 yards, including a 15-yard payoff toss to Frank Grant, and Mark Moseley kicked the gamewinning extra point for the Redskins with 40 seconds left in the game. The Redskins then blocked a 45-yard field goal attempt by Fred Cox with five seconds remaining to hand game played in a driving rain at Cincinnati. The passes covered 34 and 18 yards to Chip Myers. Dan Pastorini's touchdown pass cut the Oilers' deficit to 16-10 in the third period but the Bengals scored again in the fourth period on Stan Fritts' four-yard run, offsetting two late scores by Houston. Colts 28 Chiefs 14

The Colts rolled to their sixth straight victory as Lydell Mitchell ran for 160 yards, including a 70-yard scoring dash to hand the Chiefs their sixth loss in 11 games. Mitchell's running boosted his season total to 889. The victory enabled the Colts to remain in contention with the Dolphins and Bills for the AFC's East Division title.

George's Trusty Toe

Oakland Raiders' Ken Stabler and George Blanda (16) watch intently as Blanda kicks 36 yard field goal with two seconds remaining in overtime quarter to give the Raiders a 37-34 win over Atlanta. Combination of that victory and Kansas City's loss to Baltimore Sunday clinched the Western Division title for the Raiders in the American Conference. (UPI)

Steelers Treated Jets Like Routine Chore

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Pittsburgh Steelers treated their game against the New York Jets Sunday like a bothersome chore, something that had to be taken care of before moving on to more important things.

But even an uninspired Steeler club was too much for the Jets as Terry Bradshaw threw two touchdown passes, his career-high 14th and 15th of the year, and Roy Gerela added two field goals in a 20-7 victory. The Jets, in fact, were shut out until 3:55 remained and Joe Namath, who was intercepted four times, threw a six-yard TD pass to Jerome Barkum.

The Steelers thus ran their winning streak to a club record nine games and are 10-1 overall. The loss was a club record eighth straight for the Jets and their ninth in 11 games.

Mel Blount was the defensive star for Pittsburgh, picking off his ninth and 10th interceptions of the season and moving to within four of the league record set in 1952 by Dick "Night Train" Lane.

But even Blount confessed it wasn't a great effort.

"We played about as good as we had to," said Blount. "But I think I probably had more fun out there today than in any game all year. I got a lot of action my way. I had good receivers playing opposite me and we were up against a big name quarterback."

The Steelers, sluggish at the outset, struggled to a 10-0 lead. Namath underthrew a wideopen Eddie Bell at the goal line from the Steeler 31 and Glen Edwards intercepted and returned 46 yards to the Steeler 48. Bradshaw took them to the nine and Gerela kicked a 26-yard field goal.

Blount's interception in the end zone gave Pittsburgh the ball on its 20 and Bradshaw took them in for their first touchdown in six plays, eluding a charge by defensive tackle Carl Barzilauskas and hitting Franco Harris along the right sideline. Harris took it in from the 20 to complete a 44-yard play and mark his first TD reception since his muchpublicized deflection catch against Oakland in the 1971 playoffs.

Pittsburgh boosted its lead to 17-0 on its first possession in the second half as Bradshaw hit Frank Lewis on an eight-yard TD pass to cap a 51-yard drive. Blount's second interception set up the last score, Gerela's 19-yard field goal.

"We were very loose, very relaxed, very confident," said Bradshaw. "We tried to just execute and get the hell out of there. I blame a lot of the poor passing on the weather. The wind was really blowing. The wind defeated me in the first half — it affected my passing — but in the second half, I decided to not let myself be bothered. I went into the third quarter determined to throw and not let it bother me."

While Bradshaw went to a short passing game to avoid the wind, Namath could not afford such a luxury and thus had four interceptions, running his league-leading total to 26.

"The wind was really tough," Namath said. "It was like throwing against a wall. But I had to go up top. Their linebackers nearly killed Steve Davis when we tried a swing pass and their line clogged up the middle so much we had to put it up. The problem was that it wasn't a consistent wind. It swirled around and made it difficult to judge."

The Marshall Plan

Redskins' quarterback Billy Kilmer (17) is caught for a seven yard loss to his 29 yard line in the fourth quarter by Minnesota's lineman Jim Marshall (70). Kilmer was called for grounding the football on the play, but the Skins went on to win, 31-30. (UPI)

Telly's Nag Big Winner

SAN MATEO, Calif. (UPI) — "It's a funny thing about horse racing, you get into it for laughs and you wind up either as happy as I am or broke. There is no middle ground."

That was actor Telly Savalas' self analysis Saturday, minutes after he had watched his horse, Telly's Pop, race off to an impressive 1-1/2 length victory in the $114,000 California Juvenile Stakes at Bay Meadows and thereby become the first winner of the Western Triple Crown for two-year-olds.

"I bought a piece of the horse from my good friend Howard Koch only because he named him for me," Savalas said. "Not for a minute did I think something was going to come of the deal. I got into it strictly for laughs and I wanted to humor Howard."

Howard Koch is a movie and television director and long-time friend of Savalas and actor Walter Matthau, who is into horse racing on a more serious level than Savalas.

Savalas, better known as Kojak to television viewers, said he was so unimpressed by Telly's Pop that he was all for selling him after he won his first race.

"That shows you how much I know about horse racing and horses," Savalas said. "That's why I've always believed this is no sport for amateurs. Me, I can't be that serious about it, baby. For me it has to be for laughs."

Savalas was laughing while Matthau was ready to slit his throat after Telly's Pop won Saturday's race here to push his earnings for five victories in six starts to $248,507, a record for a California two-year-old. Matthau was unhappy because only a month ago Savalas offered him a share of the horse and was turned down.

"Telly and Howard are great guys and I'm happy for them," said Matthau. "Sure, I'm sorry I didn't buy in when I had a chance. This horse convinced me after this race he has a chance to win an awful lot of money before he's through. Too bad he's been gelded or he could have made even more money in stud."

Telly's Pop won the Del Mar Futurity and the Norfolk Stakes at Santa Anita earlier for the first two legs of the baby Triple Crown. In the Cal Juvenile, he was backed down to odds-on by a season-record crowd of 18,725, which wagered a single race record of $326,295 and a single day record of $2,315,565, and he didn't disappoint any of his supporters.

Imacornishprince, given the best chance to upset Telly's Pop in the pre-race forecasts, cut out the pace for a mile of the mile and one-sixteenth race before falling back.

Telly's Pop was held off the pace by Francisco Mena until the final bend when he was asked to run. And that's exactly what he did, picking up four horses on the turn and then grabbing the lead at the head of the stretch. It was no contest from that point on.

Bold Impulse finished second, another 1-1/2 lengths ahead of Double Dealer with Telly's Pop going the distance in 1:42 flat and paying $3.80 to win.

Is Savalas ready to sell his share in Telly's Pop now?

"Never baby," he replied with a big smile. "This horse is going to take care of my old age."

IRVING, Tex. (UPI) — As works of art go, Sunday's New York-Dallas contest ranked right up there with a three-year-old's fingerprinting.

But even if it wasn't a Rembrandt, the Cowboys were willing to pay top price for it.

A win, after all, is a win, and the drab 14-3 decision over the offensively ineffective New York Giants Sunday made Dallas a division leader again.

The Cowboys are now deadlocked with the St. Louis Cardinals atop the NFC East with an 8-3 mark and those two teams meet next Sunday in St. Louis. The winner of that one all but certainly will own a place in the playoffs.

"We weren't mentally sharp," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "But we got this one out of the way and all the marbles are on the line next week. That's the big one."

Dallas turned a potential runaway into a reasonably close contest.

Roger Staubach hit Jean Fugett less than four minutes deep in the game with a 54-yard touchdown pass and late in the first quarter Staubach teamed with Golden Richards on a 62-yard throw that set up Doug Dennison's one-yard scoring plunge.

But that was it. The Cowboys twice threatened in the second quarter, only to have Jim Stienke twice intercept Staubach and over the final two periods, Dallas could only get close enough for one missed field goal try.

But the Cowboys' defense, which has had difficulty slowing people down all season, had an enjoyable day against former Dallas quarterback Craig Morton.

Morton was making his first trip back to Texas Stadium since being traded to New York in the midst of last season and he probably would just as soon have stayed in Manhattan.

The Giants' quarterback could hit only eight of 24 passes for 102 yards and had three intercepted.

"I didn't play well," said Morton. "The evidence was on the field. When I don't play well, we don't win. I had a bunch of chances, we had receivers open, but I didn't get the ball to them."

New York's only score came on a 35-yard field goal by George Hunt in the first quarter.

The Giants' only other threat came early in the third quarter when New York drove to the Dallas seven-yard line, only to have Morton misread the coverage on a safety blitz and throw right into the hands of Cowboy defensive end Ed Jones.

"The fact that Craig is a former Cowboy made us play harder," said Dallas defensive tackle Jethro Pugh. "But the most important thing was that we had to win this one.

"The St. Louis game is the big one. They will be extra tough because of their loss (to Buffalo on Thanksgiving Day). They hang in there to the end and we will have to be ready."

Dolphins' Morrall On The Spot

MIAMI (UPI) — While everyone else is worrying about how 41-year-old Earl Morrall will fill in at quarterback for Miami's injured Bob Griese, Dolphins Coach Don Shula has other things on his mind.

Like what happened to the Miami running game? Or why could Baltimore run up the middle with ease in the second half of the Dolphins' surprising 33-17 loss a week ago?

"Earl looks as good to me as he ever did," Shula says of the 20-year veteran. "I think he'll hold up his end of the deal, but now we've got to get these other elements going."

Shula hopes the Dolphins (7-3) will start that task in tonight's game here against New England (3-7), as Miami hopes to stay ahead of pursuing Buffalo and Baltimore in the tight AFC Eastern Division race.

The Dolphins have averaged only 123 yards a game in their last four outings not bad by some standards, but not good enough for a team that lives by the run. Shula has spread the blame among his players.

Mexican Cuppers Advance

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Mexico beat Canada 3-2 in their Davis Cup series Sunday and will face the United States in the next round here next month.

In the first of Sunday's final two singles, Dale Power, 26-year-old from Toronto, tied the series at 2-2 by beating Mexico's Joaquin Loyo Mayo 3-6, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4.

In the final match, Mexico's Marcelo Lara beat Rejean Genois, 22, of Loretteville, near Quebec City, 4-6, 6-2, 1-6, 6-1, 7-5.

It was the 19th meeting between the two nations in Davis Cup and the 17th victory by Mexico.

Until the last two sets of the Lara-Genois match it looked as though things would go the way of Canada, which lost Friday's opening two singles and won Saturday's doubles in the five-match series.

Change Priority For Stadium

NEW YORK (UPI) — The City of New York, in lieu of a proposed $2 million program to improve the area near Yankee Stadium, will spend $300,000 to buy equipment for the New York Yankees, it was reported today by the New York Times.

According to the Times, the original idea to upgrade the neighborhood at a cost of $2 million was abandoned as part of an economy move in the current fiscal crisis.

Instead, a portion of the money will be spent on equipment, including $215,000 for a tarpaulin, $65,000 worth of security devices, $14,000 to strengthen the supports of the scoreboard and $7,000 for a carpet or terrazzo floor for the team's general offices.

Yankee Stadium itself is in the midst of a major renovation that has caused the Yankees to play their home games in Shea Stadium the last two years. Yankee Stadium is scheduled to be ready for the 1976 season, but according to the Times, the cost of the project has risen to about $75 million, some three times the original $24 million estimate made in 1972.

Butler Wins In Colombia

BARRANQUILLA, Colombia (UPI) — Peter Butler of Great Britain shot a two-under-par 70, the best score of the day, to win the $12,000 Colombian Open golf tournament of the Caribbean coast Sunday with a four-round score of 291.

Butler held off a late challenge by Argentine veteran Roberto de Vicenzo to capture the $4,000 top prize at the Caujatal Lakes Country Club.

Pardon My Back

Ilie Nastase of Romania appears to be giving his back to Arthur Ashe at press conference in Stockholm Sunday following their uncompleted match in the $130,000 Masters tennis tournament. Ashe was disqualified for walking off court and Nastase for his unsportsmanlike behavior. Officials said match would be null and void and would not be replayed although both players remain in the tournament which brings together the eight most successful players on the world circuit. (UPI)

It Was Ilie Nastase's Most Un-Shining Hour

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The opening day of the $130,000 Masters Tennis Tournament erupted into chaos Sunday when both Arthur Ashe and Ilie Nastase were disqualified after an incident-packed match which ended with the American storming off the court.

Ashe, one of the coolest tempered players on the pro circuit, headed for the dressing rooms halfway through the final set when Nastase, who had already been warned by the Swedish umpire for his behavior, began arguing with the crowd after a disputed point.

West German referee Horst Klosterkemper came on court to admonish the Romanian, but when Nastase continued to delay the game, Ashe picked up his rackets and stalked off.

Klosterkemper then talked with both players, who could be heard shouting at each other in the dressing rooms, for an hour before announcing his decision to disqualify both men — the first time such a ruling has been made in a major tournament.

Ashe had clawed his way back into the match after a disastrous start and was leading 1-6, 7-5, 4-1, with Nastase trailing 13-40 on his own serve when the match boiled over. Nastase earlier had been warned by umpire Goeran Sandstroem for smashing a ball at a linesman and throwing his racket across the court.

The two players were still exchanging words at the news conference where the referee's decision was announced.

"I've played this guy a million times. I won't take that crap from him any more," said Ashe.

"Every time it is my fault," said Nastase who earlier this year was disqualified for unsportsmanlike behavior in the Canadian Open in Toronto and at the Bournemouth Hard Court championships two weeks before Wimbledon.

"Remember this. It was I who stayed on court. Ashe was the one who walked out," said Nastase.

Klosterkemper said he was about to disqualify Nastase for his antics when Ashe walked off. "It is my decision to disqualify them both. Nobody wins and nobody loses and the match will not be replayed," he said.

The disputed point acting as a catalyst to a match which was never far from the boil came when Nastase served before Ashe was ready. Ashe caught the ball and the umpire ruled a let and told Nastase to serve two more.

The Romanian refused and began arguing first with the umpire, then with Ashe and finally with the crowd.

Ashe said he gave the umpire two minutes to disqualify Nastase before he walked off. "The umpire did not do what he should have done. I will protest in the strongest possible way to the committee," Ashe said.

In earlier less turbulent matches, defending champion Guillermo Vilas of Argentina defeated Harold Solomon of Silver Springs, Md., 6-3, 6-4. Local Bjorn Borg demolished Mexico's Raul Ramirez 6-3, 6-3 and Manuel Orantes of Spain downed Ilie's Adriano Panatta 6-4, 7-6.

Kareem, Allen Know the Feeling

By United Press International

Lucious Allen and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar know the feeling of winning at home in Los Angeles.

Allen and Abdul-Jabbar, in their collegiate days under John Wooden at UCLA, hardly ever experienced the taste of defeat at the Bruins' cozy home, Pauley Pavilion. Now, as proes with the Los Angeles Lakers, their finding it much the same.

Thanks to Allen's eight points in the last four minutes Sunday, the Lakers downed the Portland Trail Blazers 116-109 for their 11th consecutive home victory. Portland had trailed by 16 points at halftime but rallied back when Abdul-Jabbar fouled out.

Allen, scoreless in the third period, contributed two rebounds and one steal in the final four minutes in addition to his eight points and finished with 20 points and five assists. Abdul-Jabbar, meanwhile, wound up with 22 points and 12 rebounds.

Elsewhere in the National Basketball Association, Kansas City topped the New York Knicks 110-98 and Philadelphia sacked New Orleans 113-96.

76ers 113, Jazz 96

Reserve forward Steve Mix scored 12 points in the second quarter to spark Philadelphia over the slumping Jazz. Doug Collins led the 76ers with 20 points, while New Orleans, still playing without Pete Maravich, was led by Louie Nelson's 27 points.

Kings 110, Knicks 98

Nate Archibald and Jimmy Walker combined for 46 points to ignite Kansas City over the Knicks. The Kings put together a 15-4 spurge at the start of the fourth quarter to break the game open. The Knicks have now lost five of their last six games.

Nets 113, Colonels 84

Julius Erving provided the offense for the Nets with 28 points while centers Swen Nater and Kim Hughes teamed for 26 rebounds to put away Kentucky. In the fourth quarter, Hughes scored 13 of his 15 points and collected 10 of his 12 rebounds. Brian Taylor added 19 and John Williamson 18 for the Nets.

Spurs 127, Spirits 115

James Silas scored 15 third period points to ignite the Spurs past St. Louis. Silas finished with 30 points as the Spurs outscored St. Louis 26-10 during one span of the third quarter to ice the game. Billy Paulitz and George Gervin had 29 points each for San Antonio.

Rangers, Bruins Both Gloating

It was, perhaps, the first night both the New York Rangers and Boston Bruins could gloat together over the blockbuster five-man player deal they consummated a few weeks ago.

The Bruins, despite the absence of Bobby Orr, extended their unbeaten streak to 11 games by downing the Pittsburgh Penguins 4-2 Sunday night. No small part of that victory, however, was the contribution of ex-Rangers Jean Ratelle and Brad Park.

The Rangers, meanwhile, got back on the winning track by slamming their friendly cousins, the St. Louis Blues, 5-2. Biggest contributor to the Ranger victory was none other than Phil Esposito, the key figure (as far as they were concerned) in the deal that sent Park and Ratelle to Boston.

Esposito scored two goals and opened the Ranger scoring with a power play marker.

"My ankle is getting stronger," said Esposito, who almost immediately after coming to New York went out with the painful injury — thus nullifying any initial Ranger gloating. "I'll still have to live with it for a month or so, but I'm getting my timing back."

And if Esposito's timing continues to improve, the Rangers may soon be able to enjoy the prosperity the Bruins have had since the trade — on a regular basis.

With Orr sidelined with more knee surgery, the Bruins still have managed to continue their unbeaten streak over the last two games and Sunday it was a rebound of Ratelle's shot that Wayne Cashman converted for the go-ahead goal against the Penguins, while Park later rammed home an empty-net insurance marker with 12 seconds to go.

Elsewhere in the NHL, Montreal edged the New York Islanders 3-2, Philadelphia vanquished Vancouver 5-3, Kansas City and Chicago deadlocked at 1-1 and Atlanta bested California 4-1.

Over in the World Hockey Association, Ron Ward scored a league record-tying five goals to lead Cleveland over the Toronto Toros 10-9, Edmonton edged Calgary 4-2, Quebec shaded Phoenix 2-1, Denver topped Indianapolis 4-2, Houston drubbed San Diego 8-4 and Winnipeg triumphed over Minnesota 5-3.

Flyers 5, Canucks 3

Don Saleski scored a late third period goal to break a 3-3 tie and climax a come-from-behind Philadelphia win over Vancouver. Vancouver surged out to a 2-0 lead, but the Flyers came back to go ahead with three second period goals from Andre Dupont, Rick MacLeish and Mel Bridgeman.

Canadiens 3, Islanders 2

Steve Shutt scored two goals, including the game-winner as Montreal increased its first place lead to 11 points over idle Los Angeles in the Norris Division. Shutt's winning goal came at 14:59 of the final period after Islander goalie Glenn Resch initially made the shot but failed to hold on.

Black Hawks 1, Scouts 1

Wilf Paiement scored with 10:20 to go to earn Kansas City its tie with Chicago. The deadlocked nonetheless enabled the Black Hawks to extend their unbeaten streak to 14 games. Grant Mulvey scored the Chicago goal in the first period.

Flames 4, Seals 1

Tom Lysiak scored two goals to spark a second period outburst that propelled Atlanta over California. Lysiak's goals, his ninth and tenth of the year, highlighted a three goal outburst by the Flames which broke a 1-1 tie.

After Ward scored his five goals, which helped wipe out an 8-2 Toronto lead, John A. Stewart scored the gamewinner for Cleveland which took a record 63 shots in the 109 shot-fest with the Toros. "I'm excited because we were losing 8-2 and it made us turn it around and win," Ward said. "But I just want to get 30 goals this year. Anybody can score five if he's lucky."

Bobby Orr Under Knife Again

BOSTON (UPI) — Once more the hockey world holds its breath, hoping one of its greatest stars can make another comeback from another knee operation.

It will be nearly two months before Bobby Orr can play for the Boston Bruins, but what effect will the fifth operation in eight years have on the game's top defenseman?

"I would say that Bobby definitely will play very well again before this season ends — no doubt about it in my mind," said Dr. Carter Rowe, the Massachusetts General Hospital orthopedic specialist who has opened Orr's knee the last three times.

Rowe said the most recent operation, performed Saturday after Orr had reported persistent pain, was the first surgery done on the outside of the knee. "His condition is fine now and I expect Bobby to rejoin the team about Feb. 1," said Rowe.

Orr, who first sent chills through the Bruins' corporate structure as a preteen sensation in Parry Sound, Ont.,

KINGSTON

Guistino's Market, with five players scoring 20 or more points, ran up one of the YMCA B League's biggest totals of the season in a 138-70 rout of McDonald's.

In other games, Uhl's Construction won over Wenzel Amusement 69-59, Well II romped over Tudoroff's 83-64, Cannonballs tripped Raggedy Jeans 84-66 and The Hustlers forfeited to Wells Wolfpack.

Corey Schoonmaker led Guistino's with 37 points. Chris Nordstrom had 28, Gary Chambers 25 (22 rebounds);

Ben Hamilton 20. Bob Schlanger (22) and Steve Richter (20) were high for McDonald's.

Ed North (23) points and George Barnes (20 rebounds) led Uhl's. Joe Wenzel had 15 points and Jim Yarter 25 rebounds for Wenzel's.

Jim Adams rimmed 31 points and Tom Tegeler 24 for Well II. Frank Sammas had 18 rebounds. Jo Noyal hit 18 points and Bruce Wood 11 rebounds. Val Galm added 21 points. Wayne Platte had 19 points and Hugh Schrowang 14 points for Raggedy Jeans.

BOSTON HEIGHTS, Ohio (UPI) — Betty Conway hears a variety of excuses from motorists who do not have a toll ticket when they leave the Ohio Turnpike.

The latest toll collector had to write was "Lost ticket. Wolf ate ticket."

A gray-haired man in his 70s drove up to her booth recently, informed her he did not have his ticket and told her "a wolf ate it."

The man pointed to the back seat of his car where two wolf cubs were playing and said, "The ticket must have fallen on the floor and one of them ate it."

Research Diet As Cancer Cause

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A public health authority has called for stepped-up research into the possibility that diet may play a major role in human cancer.

Dr. Ernst Wynder, president of the American Health Foundation in New York, said studies of populations around the world suggest nutrition may have a part in half of all cancers in women and a third of those affecting men.

He led a symposium on cancer and nutrition sponsored in May by the National Cancer Institute and the American Cancer Society. Reports from the meeting were published Sunday in the journal Cancer Research.

For example, Wynder said, it is possible the human processes that handle food in the body may not be able to cope with all the cholesterol consumed in fat-rich foods. High cholesterol diets already have been linked to heart disease.

"As a matter of public health, it seems prudent to suggest that all individuals should lower their intake of total fat calories and cholesterol," he said.

Wynder said one way diets may affect cancer is in the form of nutrients, additives or contaminants that may start, promote or accelerate cancer growth. Another possibility is that dietary deficiencies may lead to biochemical abnormalities that in turn start cancer processes.

Wynder said a third way would be in the form of nutritional excesses that may induce metabolic abnormalities which could promote cancers. He said too much of some kinds of food may be particularly important.

"We must consider whether the human metabolic process can properly handle the enormous excess of foods so prevalent in our developed society," he said in a report opening the conference.

"The consequences of such excesses, in view of our increasing sedentary lifestyle, very possibly could be drastic and therefore this area must be further investigated."

Communists Agree To Participate

HELSINKI, Finland (UPI) — Finland had a new coalition government today — the first since 1970 in which the nation's second largest party, the Communist Party, agreed to participate.

President Urho K. Kekkonen Sunday appointed a five-party government of national emergency and picked Martti Miettunen, a retired Center party politician who was premier in 1961-1962, to head the government.

The Communists received four of the 18 cabinet posts, including the Ministry of Manpower.

Kekkonen made an unprecedented appeal Nov. 27 to the five parties to form a government and gave them until today to comply.

The coalition of Social Democrats, Communists, Center party, Swedish party and liberals holds 152 seats in the 200-member parliament.

Premier Miettunen, 68, told reporters: "The government's most important and urgent task is to secure employment."

The Communists also have labeled unemployment as the most important problem in Finland and Kekkonen, in effect, directly challenged them to solve the problem from within the government instead of through parliamentary opposition.

The already split Communist party argued fiercely before agreeing to join the government.

Aarne Saarinen, leader of the moderate Communist faction, said, "We have taken the responsibility, we have had some very hot feelings. This is a test period and we shall soon see how the experiment works."

The government lists 63,200 unemployed or 2.8 per cent of the work force among the 4.7 million Finns. The figure is considered very high by Finnish standards and is expected to rise to three per cent.

The new government also faces a 1975 trade deficit of $2.1 billion and an annual inflation rate of 17 per cent.

Finland's last government resigned in June saying it could not handle the country's economic crisis.

Make Holiday Ornaments

NEW YORK

"Looking for some unusual ornaments for the holiday season?" asks Kathleen Strawhacker, consumer information specialist for Johnson Wax.

"There are items around the house that are made to order." One example, she points out, is the cap on a bottle of a fabric softener such as Rain Barrel. "They're already bell-shaped and when they've been painted, dusted with glitter and had a hole tapped in the top with a nail, they can be hung with wire for a festive look", she says. "Take a look around your house for potential ornaments among those things you might otherwise throw away."

'Fiscal Chaos' In Army

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Army may have been subsidizing at its own expense U.S. arms sales abroad, its auditors have discovered. Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., called the findings an example of "rampant mismanagement and financial chaos" in the Defense Department.

"Army procurement appropriations were over-obligated and foreign sales may have been subsidized at the expense of the Army's direct funds," said a report by the Army's audit agency.

Aspin, who obtained a copy of the report, said it is against the law to "over-obligate" money and to subsidize sales. He called the audit "the most devastating case I have ever seen of rampant mismanagement and financial chaos within the Pentagon."

Assistant Army Secretary Hadlai A. Hull told UPI the problems turned up in the audit are now being resolved, public.

partly by converting from hand entries to computers at the International Logistics Command in New Cumberland, Md.

The audit found: — The Army made payments to contractors for foreign sales before receiving the money from the foreign purchasers—an apparent violation of the pay-as-you-go requirement of the Foreign Military Sales Act. Hull said there always was more than enough in the foreign sales trust fund to cover the Army payouts.

— For actual sale items, the audit said, "the Army did not have a clear pricing policy. We identified actual over- and underpricing of $101 million: $56 million in overcharges and $45 million in undercharges."

— For added costs such as transportation, test ammunition and lubricants, it said, "In some cases the costs were computed wrong or added twice. Over and underbilling could be as much as $50 million: $26 million in overcharges and $24 million in undercharges."

— "Indications are that the Army is not recovering all of its administrative costs on (foreign military sales) cases," the audit said, since it "reported spending $31 million to manage the foreign sales program in 1974 but collected only $13 million based on deliveries."

A Defense Department spokesman said a study is under way to see if the 2 per cent surcharge for administrative costs was too small.

Hamilton paid up. And it sure paid off.

The War of Independence had put us in the red for $27 million in securities.

It would have been easy to shortchange the public by paying them off at depressed market value. But Hamilton said no.

So he insisted that every debt be paid in full. And they were.

Death Toll Below Predicted Figure

By UPI

The final death count from the Thanksgiving holiday traffic toll remained well below preholiday projections despite blustery weather that complicated driving.

A wayward eagle was responsible for one of the worst accidents of the 102-hour weekend.

A pickup truck rambling down a Texas highway with two young women and a one-year-old girl inside collided with an eagle flying across the truck's path. All three occupants were thrown from the truck and the two women died.

Also among the dead were three members of a Stanford, Mich., family, killed Saturday when their car went out of control two miles west of Winn, Mich., careened into the oncoming lane and was struck broadside by another car.

Powerful storms swept the midlands and portions of the West on the opening day of the holiday period, snarling traffic and stranding motorists. More inclement weather persisted Sunday as holiday travelers headed home.

Snow swirled over portions of the West and Northwest. Rain, sometimes interspersed with snow, stretched over portions of New York and wind storms and heavy snows assailed portions of the nation's midsection.

A Thanksgiving storm that swept over Utah was responsible for five deaths — four of them mishaps on snow-slicked roadways.

The fifth was a teen-age cross country skier caught in the Wasatch Mountains by heavy snows Friday and found dead beneath the crust Sunday afternoon.

The National Safety Council had predicted between 450 and 550 persons would die in the four-day period between 6 p.m. last Wednesday and midnight Sunday. But despite the storms, the death toll remained well below the projected proportions.

A United Press International count as of 2 a.m. EST Monday showed 308 persons had died on highways since the start of the holiday period. A breakdown of accidental deaths:

Kilauea Volcano Simmering Down

HILO, Hawaii (UPI) — The 500-foot Kilauea volcano, triggered into dazzling eruptions by Hawaii's mightiest earthquake in more than a century, was simmering down today without any spurts of lava. But aftershocks were still shaking the big island.

Two persons, including a Boy Scout leader, died Saturday when a 25-foot wave stirred up by the quake churned over a beach campsite near the volcano. More than 50 persons were injured — many the victims of crashing waves.

Officials said the quake itself caused $2 million in damage to homes and businesses.

Dr. Jaak Lockwood, a geologist at the Volcanoes National Park Observatory, said there were many aftershocks and the volcano itself was "still erupting" but there were no signs of lava on the surface.

Lockwood said the volcano was draining itself through the southwest rift zone. Seismologist Peter Lipman said Kilauea was still very unstable.

The big island was hit first by a 5.3 Richter quake shortly after midnight. Then, just before dawn, the 7.3 Richter tremor rocked the island for 10 minutes. A tidal wave alert was broadcast.

Dr. Robert Tilling, in charge of the observatory, said Sunday's 250-foot lava eruptions sounded like "jet roars."

Indiana State Sen. Paul Swisher, who was in his Hilo hotel room when both quakes occurred, said he had never experienced a tremor before but "there was no doubt in my mind what the second one was all about."

Boy Scout Timothy Twigg-Smith, 13, one of some 35 persons who had been camping on Kalape Beach 1½ miles from the epicenter, said:

"We were all sleeping in tents ... when the first quake woke us up about 3:30, but nobody paid much attention, and we went back to sleep. Then at 4:30 the ground started sliding and rolling."

"It was still quivering when this big wave came out of the night and crashed on top of us. It was the biggest wave I've ever seen."

Twigg-Smith said he was thrown on some bushes and covered by water. He held on until the water subsided.

Searchers said one of the two fatalities, Michael Cruz, 26, was believed to have been buried in a big trench formed when the earth opened up just behind the campsite.

The body of the scout leader, Dr. James Mitchell of Hilo, was found in the trench — about 160 feet wide and 50 feet deep.

For children, Horner said, so-called luxury gifts, mostly toys, will be replaced with necessities. That means the parents can expect the kids to turn up their noses en masse Christmas morning as they unwrap that oft-maligned present — clothes.

Kennedy Forum Set

WOODSTOCK

Facts and theories regarding the assassination of President John F. Kennedy 12 years ago will be explored Dec. 2 at the fourth Woodstock Community Forum sponsored by the Self Defense Committee.

Featured speaker will be Jeff Gottlieb of the Assassination Information Bureau, Cambridge, Mass., with slides and movies, as well as "evidence ignored by the Warren Commission in its acceptance of the Oswald single assassin theory," according to the committee. The 8:30 p.m. program will be held at the Woodstock Artists' Association.

NOTICE OF CHANGE IN GAS RATE SCHEDULE

On November 26, 1975, Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corporation filed with the Public Service Commission of the State of New York amendments to gas rate schedule PSC No. 11 — Gas to become effective December 28, 1975. Said amendments provide that the existing gas service to the premises located at 111 Loughran Park, Kingston, New York, which has been discontinued to the premises because the structure is unsafe, shall be discontinued. The gas service to the premises has been discontinued by the applicant for service by the customer of record, the replacement gas equipment is of no larger capacity than the damaged equipment and the gas usage does not exceed the amount to which it was previously entitled.

TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES, GROUPS AND PERSONS

The above-named City of Kingston, New York, is hereby notified that the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development has received funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (P.L. 93-383) to be used for the following projects:

1. Roundout Community Center

To provide needed outdoor recreational facilities for this neighborhood. The project is located on Broadway and Spring Street which serves the low and moderate income persons in this section of the City.

2. The first phase of this project requires the acquisition of two residential properties, and in addition, a vacant non-residential property. The acquired properties will be demolished and the gas usage will be completed during the first project year.

3. The second phase, consisting of the improvements, will be completed during the second project year. A program of spot demolition with/without land acquisition will be utilized to remove severe blighting conditions and public improvements including sidewalks, street and utilities will be implemented in this older city residential neighborhood. This activity will be supportive to the rehabilitation of properties under Section 312 program in addition to other rehabilitation programs established by the City in an effort to conserve the existing housing stock in the Ponckhockie Neighborhood.

IV. Loughran Park Playground Improvements

To provide better recreational facilities in the City-operated Loughran Park located between Manor Place and Charlotte Street, the improvements include the construction of two macadam tennis courts and the installation of new kids playground equipment, consisting of swing sets, slides, benches, etc. The improvements will be implemented in this older city residential neighborhood. This activity will be supportive to the rehabilitation of properties under Section 312 program in addition to other rehabilitation programs established by the City in an effort to conserve the existing housing stock in the Ponckhockie Neighborhood.

None of the properties listed are eligible to be listed on the Federal Register of Historic Places will be affected in any way by these projects.

2. The projects will comply with all Regional and State land use plans 3. No Federal, State, or local standards or regulations will be violated by any of the projects.

An Environmental Review Record respecting the within projects has been made by the above-named City of Kingston, which documents the environmental review of the projects and more fully sets forth the reasons why such Statement is not required. This Environmental Review Record is on file at the Office of Community Development, 97 Broadway, City of Kingston, and is available for public examination and copying, upon request, between the hours of 9:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Such written comments should be received at the above address on or before December 23, 1975. All such comments so received will be considered and the City of Kingston will request the release of Federal funds or take any administrative action on the within projects prior to date specified in the preceding sentence.

Your Astrograph

For Tuesday, Dec. 2, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You can easily win co-operation today if your approach is frank and open. Lay your cards on the table.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Keep your material goals in mind today. They'll inspire you to put forth the effort for success in your endeavors.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

You'll be meeting someone socially whom you'll have an instant affinity for. An old friend will make the introductions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This is a good time to begin a creative project, especially if it's something to do with beautifying your surroundings.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The way you'll handle yourself today will make a lasting impression upon those you meet for the first time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today, don't leave an important matter half-finished. It's to your advantage to clean it up now, if at all possible.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Weigh your alternatives carefully today before making an important decision. You have more advantages than you may realize.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your material prospects are extremely bright today. Concentrate on situations that can offer you personal gain.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) What you hope for is not out of reach today if you gamble on your ingenuity and resourcefulness, rather than someone else's.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your best returns today come by letting others think your ideas are their own. Results, not credits, are what to look for.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Don't be a loner today — get out. Mix with friends if you don't have anything on the agenda stir something up.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Spend as much time as possible today on a goal of paramount importance. Good things will happen if you'll work at it.

Your Birthday
Dec. 2, 1975

You will have an opportunity this year to operate in a more independent manner. Things that tied you down will be eliminated. You'll be more your own person.

the ten after dummy played low!"

Oswald "Actually, the nine was played from dummy. Perhaps he should have played the king on the theory that I was then the sort of young genius (idiot) who might underlead an ace against a slam, but no one can really blame him."

Jim "Culbertson really should have held the king of spades for his six-heart bid. Give him the king and East the queen and you would have been a genius."

Oswald "It still hurts. The Culbertson team won the tournament. Our team came in an unhappy second."

Pancake House Safe Stolen

Police Beat

By Matt Spireng
TOWN OF ULSTER
Burglars made off with a safe reportedly containing some $1,000 in cash and checks from the International House of Pancakes in the Town of Ulster.

According to Ulster County Sheriff's deputies, the thief or thieves had to smash concrete around the safe, which was embedded in the floor, in order to remove it.

The burglary was discovered at about 6:40 a.m. today by a garbage collector, authorities said. The rear door of the building had been pried open, apparently sometime early today, detectives said.

Investigation of the burglary is continuing.

USDA Open House

KINGSTON
The three agencies of the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) that provide services in Ulster County will conduct an open house at their new office facilities in the North Front Street Dental Building on Friday, Dec. 12 at 1 p.m.

Congressman Hamilton Fish Jr. (R-25) and Peter J. Savaga, chairman of the Ulster County Legislature, have been invited to attend the open house and participate in the formal ceremonies.

The three departments now located at the new dental building are the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service, Farmers Home Administration and the Soil Conservation Service. Previously, the departments were located at separate sites in uptown Kingston.

USDA officials say that the consolidation of office space will provide greater conveniences for the public and result in a more efficient operation of the three related government services.

The new USDA offices are located at the corner of North Front Street and Washington Avenue.

KINGSTON
Mayor Francis R. Koenig — apparently prompted by a recent court decision which led to a $585,000 tax rebate for Hudson Cement — has announced the appointment of a five-member "bi-partisan" committee to investigate "the problem of certiorari proceedings" and to come up with recommendations to prevent further tax assessment setbacks.

The Hudson Cement case was the latest, and most prominent, in a series of certiorari proceedings brought against the city in recent years by taxpayers who felt they were being over-assessed. In many of those instances, the tax assessments were reduced, creating, according to Mayor Koenig, "additional tax burdens on the other property owners in the city."

"It is most apparent to me," added the Mayor, "that immediate action must be taken to once and for all put an end to this most serious problem."

Vincent Bradley of 116 Green Street, an attorney, was appointed chairman of the committee. The other members are Martin Aaron of Fowler and Keith, Inc.; Albert Teetsel of 189 Fairview Avenue, a banker; Mrs. Jewells Cioni of 80 West Chestnut Street and George Glaser of 140 First Avenue.

The committee has until Dec. 31 to conduct its investigation and issue its recommendations. The Mayor has suggested that the committee meet with the city's Corporation Counsel and Assessor, as well as with the city's Board of Assessment Review, to obtain necessary information and suggestions.

Noting that certiorari proceedings "have plagued the city of Kingston for a good number of years," the Mayor added that, "based upon the findings of this committee, it is hopeful that immediate action may be taken in the year 1976 to correct the problem to the benefit of the residents and taxpayers of the City of Kingston."

The Hudson Cement case involved a negotiated reduction in the firm's tax assessment which forces the city to pay almost $600,000 in back taxes to Strelene Realty (owners of Hudson Cement).

Specifically, the city owes Strelene $186,051.74 for 1973, $203,736.74 for 1974 and $193,358.91 for 1975 — a total of $583,147.40. Strelene's assessment was reduced from $4 million to $1,408,000 in 1973, $1,468,000 in 1974 and $1,528,000 in 1975.

In addition, a recent certiorari proceeding brought by Kingston Plaza resulted in a tax loss of $37,387.87 for the city after a court-ordered assessment reduction. The two cases represent $620,535.27 in tax rebates that the city will have to pay to the two corporations; $589,000 of that will be paid through the issuance of serial bonds.

Council to Act On Bid

KINGSTON
A resolution calling for the acceptance of the low bid for the purchase of three 23-passenger mini-buses by the City of Kingston has been added to the agenda for Tuesday's Kingston Common Council meeting.

The resolution calls for the acceptance of a bid of $19,798 per bus ($57,612 total) by Grumman Allied Industries of Garden City.

Bids for the buses were opened last week, with bids coming in considerably lower than expected by city officials, who have received commitments from state and federal agencies for a $94,000 grant for the purchase of the buses for the expansion of the city's mass transportation system. The city is required to pay five per cent of the cost of the project.

Other bids received were from DeMico Motors of Kingston ($20,684 per bus), and from Minibus Inc. of Downey, Calif. ($29,140 per bus).

The city's choice must be approved by the state.

The city is currently serviced by only one bus, and addition of the three mini-buses is expected to result in the opening of new routes.

The resolution also calls for the acceptance of the low bid for three transit coach fareboxes to be installed in the buses.

The low bid was received from Diamond Manufacturing Inc. of Kansas City, Mo., which submitted a unit price of $368.69 per farebox.

The council meets at 7:30 p.m. at City Hall.

Ransacked

At least five residences in the Garden Street-Shufeldt Street area of Kingston were reported ransacked by burglars over the weekend, according to Kingston detectives. Various amounts of money were missing from the houses, authorities said.

Two Injured

Two New Jersey men were hospitalized Sunday following a one-car crash on the Thruway in the Town of Rosendale.

Thruway State Police said the car, operated by John Bucco of Colts Neck, N.J., ran off the highway into a ditch and overturned at about 4 p.m.

Hospitalized were two passengers in the auto, Matthew Harris, 20, of Woodcliff Lake, N.J., who was listed in fair condition today at Benedictine Hospital, and Steven O'Conner, 18, of Milburn, N.J., who was listed in poor condition today in the intensive care unit at the hospital.

Rape Reported

Ulster County Sheriff's Department detectives are reportedly investigating a rape which occurred early Sunday. A Kingston woman was reportedly abducted from near her Emerick Street residence and was driven outside the city, where she was raped. Further details on the alleged rape were not available.
